JUVENILE CAMP HEAD

By LIZ HUGHES, Times Staff

The man hired by the provincial government to run a new containment centre for juveniles in B.C. is a former director of the Saskatchewan agency now under judicial investigation for the alleged brutal treatment of young inmates at a wilderness prison camp.

Ron Williams has been hired by the corrections branch of the ministry of the attorney-general, effective June 27, as director of the Centre Creek camp-type containment centre for juvenile offenders near Chilliwack, scheduled to open Oct. 1 as part of the new provincial program to deal with hard-core juvenile delinquents.

Williams is the former associate director of a private, non-profit society based in Regina called Ranch Ehrlo, now the subject of a judicial inquiry into allegations that some teenaged inmates of the society's two wilderness camps in northern Saskatchewan were cruelly treated.

The two camps were closed at the urging of the RCMP and the department of northern Saskatchewan in early February and the judicial inquiry headed by District Court Judge J. H. Maher has heard a week's testimony and scheduled to resume Aug. 11.

Allegations of brutal treatment, told to RCMP by inmates, include:

—One boy who cooked too much macaroni for dinner one night was forced to eat the excess macaroni, then punched in the stomach by a staff member until he vomited, and forced to eat his own vomit;

—One punishment for wrong-doing at the camp was being forced to chop wood for periods up to 48 hours, without food;

—Inmates who attempted to escape were made to hike distances of up to 40 miles without food to show them just how far they were away from civilization.

There are about 10 allegations of brutality covering a period of about two years up until the time the camps were closed.

Williams said today in a telephone interview from his temporary office in the Chilliwack forest camp, that he had worked for Ranch Ehrlo for 11 years since its inception in 1966 until he was hired by the B.C. government last month.

"I was expecting a phone call like yours," Williams told the Times.

He said he had realized there would be concern about his hiring.

"I figured people might say, "there's Williams and he's from Ranch Ehrlo and Ranch Ehrlo's bad so why was he hired?'

"But I feel strongly that all has not been told and that the program wasn't really given a fair shake."

Williams said the board of directors of the Ranch Ehrlo society decided to close the two controversial camps for a number of reasons.

The allegations made by inmates, passed on by the RCMP, were mostly "blown out of proportion and had no basis in fact," he said.

There was no documentation to back up the allegations, but the directors did feel that some of the allegations could have a basis in

TORONTO SWELTERS

TORONTO (CP) — A record of 37 degrees Celsius (99 F) was set Wednesday in the downtown area as a heat wave turned metropolitan Toronto into a giant sauna bath.

The temperature broke the previous record for the day set in 1954 by 1½ degrees.

In the borough of North York, Hydro officials called industrial customers and appealed in radio broadcasts for a cut in electricity consumption as the system came within 15 megawatts of its peak capacity of 560 megawatts.

(See U.S. weather story, Page 34).

CBC Boss Denounces Report

OTTAWA (CP) — CBC president Al Johnson rejected today as "gratuitous and insulting" the accusation that the broadcasting media are "biased to the point of subversiveness" because broadcasters hold different opinions about what is newsworthy.

Johnson said he finds totally unacceptable the "universal condemnation of the entire electronic news media, and by inference all the news media generally, for being biased to the point of subversiveness because they have differing views on what is important to their viewers and listeners."

Johnson was reacting to a report by the Canadian Radio-television and Tele-communications Commission (CRTC) on its special inquiry into the CBC.

Despite his unequivocal rejection of the report's broad condemnations of the media, Johnson said he welcomes the report's finding that the publicly-owned CBC was not guilty of a pro-separatist bias.

However, unlike Johnson, MP Cyril Symes (NDP — Sault Ste. Marie) said he thought the damning condemnation that the electronic media are subversive is fully justified.

"I don't think that's an intemperate criticism," Symes said in an interview.

"That's hitting the nail on the head."

Johnson said it is also significant that a substantial number of the inquiry's criticism of the CBC involve problems he has already identified.

LEVESQUE TOO BUSY

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque will not take part in the provincial premiers conference Aug. 18-19 in St. Andrews, N.B., it was announced Wednesday.

In a letter to host Premier Richard Hatfield, Levesque said a heavy work load in the Quebec national assembly does not allow him to attend the conference.

Quebec will be represented at the premiers conference by Inter-governmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin.

Outlook Glum: OECD

Times News Services

PARIS — Economic experts painted a gloomy picture Wednesday of growth among industrialized countries, suggesting that inflation, unemployment and foreign trade problems will plague most of them in the next 12 months.

Real growth in Canada will increase by only about three per cent this year, said the 24-country Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development in its twice-yearly survey.

It suggested that the forecast volume increase in the gross national product GNP in Canada will be insufficient to reduce industrial slack and the unemployment rate, currently about eight per cent, "may stay very high."

The OECD "foresees that growth of real disposable income available to households will drop off sharply" because 1976 wage contracts provide lower pay increases than earlier agreements. At the same time, there will be a continuing rise in prices of food products and imports.

"Even if the rate of personal savings were to diminish sharply, say 1½ per cent, the rate of growth in consumer spending would scarcely reach half the 1976 level," the report adds.

Elsewhere, the report says growth in public spending on goods and services could accelerate this year but the growth rate will not exceed three per cent in real terms.

"As the ratio of sales to inventory seems to have reached average levels, it is improbable that inventories will contribute much to increasing general demand," the report says.

"Continuing expansion in the United States should stimulate Canadian exports," the report adds, "but it is believed that, on the whole, foreign markets will develop much less this year."

The advisory body singled out the United States as the only country where prospects for sustained expansion seem reasonably optimistic.

But it said: "The growth rates forecast for domestic demand in most other countries in the first half of next year would be insufficient to provide an incentive for capital-widening investments or to prevent a further rise in unemployment."

The U.S. should continue trying to expand its economy despite fears it could spark a new inflationary spiral, the organization said.

In its mid-1977 report, the economic watchdog for the now-Communist industrialized world said U.S. economic expansion is needed to keep the faltering economies of other nations afloat.

The OECD report said America's economic growth had been higher than expected in the past year, and predicted that although "expansion may slow down somewhat . . . a satisfactory pace . . . seems likely over coming months."

HOUSEHOLD ROBOT EVEN INSULTING

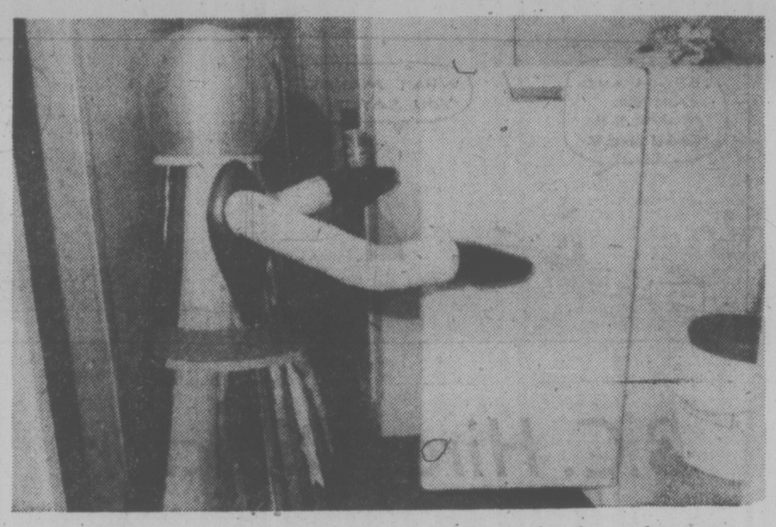
RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — A local company plans to manufacture a 5-foot-2, 180-pound robot that can serve your dinner, vacuum your rugs, babysit your kids and insult your enemies.

"We've programmed the robot to approximate human behavior," says Anthony Reichelt, president of Quasar Industries. "The only limitations to what it can do is the boundary of imagination and the cost factor."

The robot, which the company calls a domestic android, has been researched for the last eight years and is in the final testing stages.

"We're about 22 months away from production," Reichelt said, adding the robots will sell for under $4,000.

Quasar's only business is manufacturing robots. Until now, the company's robots have been used for animated props and as promotional gimmicks.



Robot, known as a domestic android, raids the refrigerator

As a domestic servant, the robot is the "ultimate appliance."

It is cone-shaped with a bubble head and two arms. It carries a computer that can be programmed by the owner with a calculator-like device. It also responds to an owner's voice.

It is programmed with a 250-word taped vocabulary and runs on 24-volt batteries.

"The robot can be programmed to answer the door at a certain time," Reichelt said. "When guests arrive, the robot can say, 'May I announce you please?' When the guests give their names, the robot tapes the conversation and plays it back to his owner."

And if anyone breaks into the owner's house, the robot is programmed to sound an alarm. It then goes to the point of entry and verbally challenges the intruder.

Lone Suspect Released In Multiple Slayings

NORTH VANCOUVER — Police returned to square one today after releasing the only suspect they had picked up in connection with the multiple riverside slayings near Chilliwack Monday night.

RCMP said the 27-year-old former mental patient they had picked up was cleared in the case. They said his movements Monday night did not place him in the area of the rifle attack which left two and possibly four teenagers dead.

Police picked the man up Wednesday, released him, and then picked him up again and held him overnight for questioning. Police had said there had been reports that the man, who had a history of using firearms, had been in the area of the shootings.

The man's name was withheld.

Staff Sergeant Dave McLay heading the RCMP investigation from Agassiz detachment, said investigations were continuing and further searches of the Fraser River near the shooting site may take place later today, depending on weather and current.

RCMP divers had to terminate operations Wednesday afternoon due to rise of more than one foot in the water-level of the river which made diving operations too dangerous to continue.

The man sought for the killings may have driven from the scene with either an accomplice or one of two other youths still missing, police also said today.

A police spokesman said a truck belonging to one of the youths was seen by a witness

"It is believed there were two people in the vehicle," McLay said. But he would not speculate whether the second person was an accomplice or as abducted person.

FRAUD RING LOOTS BANKS OF $200,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — A ring of more than 50 persons has defrauded Lower Mainland banks of $200,000 in the past year by impersonating customers, a Vancouver bank official said Wednesday.

Jack Holt, administrative inspector at the Bank of Commerce, said the bank has lost $40,000 since last summer when the ring began passing bad cheques using customer names, account numbers and signature samples.

Earlier this month the ring bilked the Bank of Montreal of $12,000 in 20 incidents during two days.

Holt said the well-organized ring obtains customer information from many sources, including theft from the mails and planting conspirators in department store accounting departments.

The ring began operating last August, Holt said, and hit the Bank of Commerce heavily during February.

He said customer impersonation is an old trick but the fraud artists have never been so well organized.

A spokesman for RCMP in North Vancouver, where the ring has been active, said the group's activities might have spread throughout Western Canada.

Egypt Fighting On Libyan Front

CAIRO (AP) — Libyan and Egyptian armored and air forces engaged in heavy fighting along the northern border today, resulting in the destruction of 40 Libyan tanks and two planes, Cairo radio reported.

Libya had no immediate comment on the reported fighting, which ended in the afternoon.

Cairo radio quoted a military spokesman as saying that 30 Libyan army trucks were destroyed and 12 members of the 9th Libyan Armored Division were taken prisoner along with 30 saboteurs.

The Egyptian radio said no Egyptians were killed but several were wounded and one truck was destroyed. The report said fighting began in the morning near an Egyptian village 350 miles west of Cairo.

Alaska Oil Arriving Aug. 7?

SEATTLE (AP) — The first tanker load of crude oil from the Alaska pipeline will be greeted with a ceremony at Cherry Point tentatively set for Aug. 7, says an Atlantic Richfield Co. spokesman.

The Arco Juneau, a 120,000-ton supertanker built in 1974 specifically for Alaska oil runs, probably will be the first tanker carrying Prudhoe Bay oil to dock in the lower 48 states, Manny Jimenez, Arco public relations representative, said Wednesday in Los Angeles.

He said the schedule is subject to change because of uncertainties over when oil will arrive at Valdez, Alaska, the southern pipeline terminus. The trip from Alaska to the Washington port will take about 3½ days.

Meanwhile, Governor Dixy Lee Ray wants to consider laying an oil pipeline underwater from the Olympic Peninsula to Whidbey Island before she supports a site for a major oil port, says one of her advisers.

Capt. Merle Adlum, president of the Inland Boatman's Union, says the governor has not decided where she would favor the siting of a major oil port.

Probe Launched Into Kerster's Claims

A internal investgation has been launched into two controversial Insurance Corp. of B.C. claims which the opposition has charged were paid because of political interference by Socred George Kerster (Coquitlam).

Education minister Pat McGeer, responsible for the crown corporation, said in the legislature Wednesday that a "thorough investigation is taking place" into the week-long accusations and revelations by the NDP and counter-charges and defence by the minister.

The opposition's interest in the issue revolves around allegations that Kerster personally interfered in the two claims and that he had an interest in interfering in them.

Payment of one of the claims, to a young New Westminster resident, Leslie Wood, benefited a personal friend of Kerster's, the opposition has charged.

Payment of the second claim benefited Surrey Dodge Ltd., a car dealership headed by Kerster until his election as MLA in 1975.

McGeer, in his counter-charge, had said the NDP is basing its case on stolen documents.

Kerster, meanwhile, said Wednesday he thinks the whole thing is "kinky."

"The only thing they haven't charged me with this week is robbing a bank," he said in an interview.

Kerster said he has asked Attorney-General Garde Gardom to launch an investigation into the "stolen" documents used by the NDP. Gardom has not yet given him an answer, he said.

McGeer repeated his stolen documents charges Wednesday, saying that "either someone is being set up, or when they pay for their stolen documents, they should pay enough to get the whole file."

The NDP has been tabling parts of the two claims files in the legislature for the past week.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said Wednesday that if the opposition receives some documents, it has a duty to make them public.

Macdonald tabled other documents Wednesday to back up his charge that claims paid out to Leslie Wood should not have been paid on their own merit, but were paid only after Kerster's interference with ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick.

The money from the claims was actually paid, not to Wood himself, but to a New Westminster finance company, First Charter Financial Corp. Ltd., headed by Bill Butler, a personal friend of Kerster's.

McGeer Patronage 'Rancid'

Education Minister Pat McGeer was accused Wednesday of "rancid, stinking, personal patronage" in hiring "one of his pals" to take over the Insurance Corporation of B.C.'s advertising account.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson, who made the accusation, told the legislature the hiring of Ray Torrasan of Torresan Rose Marketing Communications Ltd. was a despicable action contrary to government ethics and policy.

McGeer is the minister responsible for the government-owned insurance corporation.

Gibson said the ICBC account, which he valued at $75,000 a year, had been taken away from the Catton Buckham Advertising Agency and given to Torresan by the board of directors without consultation with management and without competition.

He said it is government policy to award accounts after competition and with three-year tenure, subject to early review — which was not done in this case.

"It was simply the appointment of one of the minister's pals," Gibson said.

He said Catton Buckham had been awarded the contract after competing with eight other companies and had been kept on at the end of the fiscal year working on several projects.

"All of a sudden they were chopped," Gibson said. "Claims that ICBC was simply changing projects are absolute nonsense.

"The firm was involved in continuing projects which were chopped by the minister.

McGeer said Torresan had been one of the nine firms to submit proposals when submissions were called last July, and had been asked for further submissions.

He said Catton Buckham has been dropped because "ICBC no longer needed the expertise of that agency."

The minister said he did not know to what extent the Torresan agency would be used, but refused to put his seat on the line if the firm received more than half of the $75,000 collected by the Catton agency.

He said Gibson's charges were "utterly false."

"He is arrogant enough to believe that what he does is right, but the voters can only stand so much smell in their nostrils."

A spokesman for the Catton agency said ICBC did not give any reason for dropping the firm.

Charles Barber (NDP — Victoria) said Torresan advised McGeer and his two then-Liberal colleagues (Labor Minister Allan Williams and Attorney-General Garde Gardom) on the timing and details of their defection to Social Credit and wondered how much influence he still has with the minister.

McGeer said he was surprised that his connection with the Catton family, which goes back more than 30 years, had not been brought up.

He also said the Catton firm had been used by the Liberals.

Inquiry Launched Into ICBC Claim

ments tabled by Macdonald is a report by a Surrey claims centre adjuster pointing out discrepancies in the Wood claims. One of the claims was for damage done while the car was stolen, the other for damage done while Wood was driving.

The claims centre report pointed out that Wood had at first told RCMP that his car was stolen, although it turned out later he had loaned the car to a friend.

In the second claim, the report said, Wood told RCMP that he had a hitchhiker with him at the time of the accident and said he did not know the identity of the hitchhiker.

It turned out later that the hitchhiker was a friend of Wood's.

Macdonald charged that the claims should never have been paid and repeated charges that they were paid only because of Kerster's visit to Bortnick.

McGeer Wednesday produced a signed affidavit from the secretary-treasurer of Surrey Dodge, Ronald Richard Hudgins, in which Hudgins swore he had reported the claim before the car was sold and had been given a verbal go-ahead to get the car fixed.

As both Macdonald and McGeer tabled their documents, the minister commented: "If this keeps up, pretty soon we'll have the whole file."

God's Gift A Prank

FORT ST. JOHN, (CP) — A man who thought he had received a $20,000 gift from God received a conditional discharge in provincial court Wednesday.

Darrel Ray Bauman, 17, a member of a religious commune near here, was charged with attempted fraud over $200.

He was given a cheque for $20,000 as a prank by a friend on Feb. 22. Taking it seriously, he deposited it in a credit union and one month later withdrew $7,000 with which he tried to buy a truck from Westgate Chev-Olds in Edmonton.

The salesman, a former policeman, became suspicious and phoned the credit union which had by then discovered the error.

In court, Bauman said he thought the monty was a gift from Heaven because his family had been praying for money.

Pulp Pact Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia pulp and paper workers have voted 84 per cent to reject what the industry says is its final contract offer.

Identical rejection totals were reported Wednesday by both the 7,500-member Canadian Paperworkers Union and the 5,500-member Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, with only one PPWC local still to vote.

CPU western vice-president Art Gruntman aid PPWC bargaining chairman Stan Shewaga said the two unions' joint negotiating committee now will seek further meetings with the pulp and paper industrial relations bureau.

However, industry spokesman Richard Lester reiterated that pulp companies are not prepared to improve their offer of a $1-an-hour general wage increase over two years, plus improved holiday provisions and extra fringe benefits.

He said the pulp bureau is willing to meet the unions only for the purpose of clarifying terms of the proposed package.

"We made them a final offer and we aren't prepared to increase it," Lester said. "It can be clarified but we don't have any more to offer." He added that union leaders must be disappointed at receiving only an 84-per-cent rejection result with an overall turn-out of between 40 and 50 per cent.

The unions' main objection to the industry offer is that it does not include a cost-of-living adjustment clause. They also want improved pension benefits, especially for workers already retired, and a clause permitting banking of overtime.

Normally, a hotel room is not a very attractive place for a business meeting. Two big beds, a couple of uncomfortable chairs and a TV table...not much room to hold a pre-conference briefing.
At the Chateau Granville, on the other hand, you get a suite for the price of a room. So you and your client can flop on the comfortable chesterfield and easy chair, spread your papers out on the coffee table, take a couple of cool ones out of the fridge, and get down to business.
When your wife gets back from shopping, she can go into the separate bedroom, take a nap and freshen up for dinner and the nearby theatre without ever disturbing you or your papers.

STOP 'STATIC' ON HOSPITAL

Two members of the regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission indicated Wednesday night they've had enough of sniping at plans to build a new hospital on Helmcken Road.

Charles Perkins said he's tired of haring talk of "splitting" Victoria General Hospital when it's his understanding the new 300-bed hospital will be complete and stand on its own.

And Art Young went further, saying the plan to largely replace Victoria General on the Helmcken site while running a smaller and less sophisticated hospital at the present site has to work because there aren't the dollars to do it in a more acceptable manner.

"I keep getting the impression the (Victoria) General doesn't want to make it work," Young said of relocation plans. "It will work if everyone wants to make it work."

Opposition to the staged development continues to come mostly from doctors, who argue it will be more expensive, basically unworkable and possibly dangerous to patients to operate what is essentially one hospital on two sites.

Drs. John Dickson and Donald Shorting continued to express doubts Wednesday night, with Dickson arguing it has never been made clear by provincial authorities what services will be left on the present hospital site.

"We don't know what we're agreeing to."

Young said hospital plans, under debate for years, had been approved each step of the way by all committees, including doctors' committees.

"Yet we're still getting static. I find it most upsetting."

The commission Wednesday night took planning another step by appointing architects for the new hospital. Members accepted without debate the recommendation of a project building committee and named a Vancouver partnership to do the job.

They are the firms of Beinhaker-Irwin Associates, architects, engineers and planners, and Russell Vandiver Architects.

Vandiver was project director of a $60 million child and maternal unit of the B.C. Medical Centre in Vancouver which was awarded a citation for design excellence last year.

fact and decided to close the camps.

The department of northern Saskatchewan didn't want wilderness camps in its area, he said, "and they wanted us to close."

The camp was designed for the toughest type of juvenile delinquents who cannot make it in society, Williams said.

"It was designed for violent kids, for severe cases of delinquency. Some of the kids (mostly between 16 and 18) had been charged with things like attempted murder, arson and rape."

After consideration, the Ranch Ehrlo directors decided to close the camps for a "breathing time to see what good things had come out of the program and to reassess if there was validity in it."

Several news agencies which did extensive research into the camps, Williams said, "found they were totally different than expected."

Despite the allegations of severe brutality, some of the toughest kids in the camp were upset with the negative publicity given to the charges, he said.

"I personally feel a bit of sadness ... that the whole thing wasn't given a fair shake, that a potentially good program was being thrown down the drain."

The wilderness camp program is only a small part of the Ranch Ehrlo society, he said, which includes group homes and other rehabilitative facilities.

Williams said he was completely open with his new employers about his involvement with the controversial program, "but really I feel my experience with Ranch Ehrlo is definitely an asset, not a liability."

The Centre Creek facility, he said, is treatment-oriented, and does not just concentrate on taking hard-core juveniles out of society.

"The program is very concerned with the treatment of these juveniles and that is something I was concerned with when I came out to this job," he said.

Centre Creek is more a ranch camp than a wilderness camp, although it will use some wilderness-type skills, like mountain climbing, as part of its rehabilitative program, he said.

He is so far the only person hired for the new facility. Other staff members will be hired as the opening date of Oct. 1 approaches.

Poison Planned

Herbicides will be used to kill maples and alders that are suffocating young timber in a 40-acre tract west of Duncan, the B.C. Forest Service said today.

The chemicals 2,4-D and Tordon pellets will be applied about mid-August to maple stumps and red alder growth by hand. There will be no spraying, the forest service said.

Certified forest service personnel will conduct the program, which has had approval of the government's interministerial pesticide committee. There are no natural waterways within the treatment area.

50 Priests Meet Deadline for Death

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — A deadline for death arrived today for 50 Jesuit priests ordered to leave El Salvador by a secret right-wing terrorist group.

The so-called White Warriors Union, accusing them of "Communist subversion," threatened to kill all of El Salvador's 50 Jesuits "immediately and systematically" today if their ultimatum was not met.

But there were no reports of violence early today, and some observers speculated that the underground organization, reported to be linked with government security agencies, will not act immediately.

Patrols of police and submachine-gun-armed soldiers were increased Wednesday night at churches, a seminary and the Jesuit-run university in this capital city after the military government of President Carlos Humberto Romero vowed to combat terrorism "from the right or the left."

The Jesuits, who also operate three high schools, said they would do their normal work routine today despite the threats. It was the first day of final exams for their 5,000 students.

"We are not afraid," said one priest. But for the last four days they have worn nondescript civilian clothes, having put away their black suits and Roman collars. And all Jesuits in San Salvador met in a secret location Wednesday night, presumably to discuss strategy as the deadline approached.

Officials of the Jesuits' Jose Simeon Canas University met Wednesday with Romero, a general who is the latest in a long line of rightist military rulers in this Central American republic.

Romero's office said only that the meeting was part of the "process of dialogue with different sectors of the country," but it was believed they discussed security measures for the priests.

Church-state tension has heightened steadily this year in El Salvador. Roman Catholic bishops issued a statement earlier this year accusing the government and landowning class of exploitation of the peasants, and the Jesuits in particular have been active in trying to organize El Salvador's poor.

Two priests were murdered earlier this year. The White Warriors claimed responsibility for the second slaying, the shooting of Rev. Rutilio Navarro Oviedo, a Jesuit, on May 11, one day after kidnapped Foreign Minister Mauricio Borgonovo was found slain. Leftists claimed responsibility for Borgonovo's death, and the White Warriors said the priest was killed in reprisal.

Church sources say 15 other priests have been expelled from the country this year, five others were denied re-entry, and eight were arrested by police and tortured.

There are about 300 Roman Catholic priests in El Salvador, a nation of 4.5 million people— 90 per cent of them Catholic.

'An Oil Slick Away From Victoria . . .'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Clallam County in Washington state is unalterably opposed to an oil port anywhere along its coastline, the West Coast oil ports inquiry was told Wednesday.

Ronald Richards, a county commissioner, told the hearing being conducted by Dr. Andrew Thompson of the University of British Columbia, that an oil port, storage facilities and pipeline are incompatible with the existing uses of the coast.

Commissioners have declared that such development is prohibited under the provisions of the county's comprehensive development plan.

Richards suggested that the inquiry hold a session in Port Angeles, the county seat, "which, we remind you, is just one oil slick away from Victoria."

He criticized the coalition against oil pollution for suggesting that a port at or west of Port Angles is reluctantly permissible, while a Puget Sound location is not.

"We feel that any arguments advanced to ban oil trans-shipments from inner Puget Sound apply equally or greater to the strait of Juan de Fuca," Richards said.

Northern Tier Pipe Line, which is promoting the Port Angeles site, has declined to appear at the Thompson inquiry, a decision Richards described as "merely another example of that company's reluctance to present their proposal openly and publicly."

All proposals being studied involve movement of Alaskan oil by tanker along the B.C. coast. Kitimat Pipe Line Ltd. has proposed a port at Kitimat, B.C., with a pipeline to Edmonton, but is holding its project in abeyance pending a National Energy Board decision on a Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd. application.

Trans Mountain, in cooperation with Atlantic Richfield, would land oil at an expanded Arco facility at Cherry Point, then send it to Edmonton through an existing pipeline.

Northern Tier has suggested an oil port at Port Angeles, with a pipeline to be built to Clearbrook, Minn.

Drug-Search Couple Will Sue Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Surrey couple, roughed up by four drug squad detectives looking for illicit drugs last week, has decided to sue for damages.

"We've instructed our counsel to start a civil action against the four policemen," Gerald Schuck said Wednesday.

He said he and his wife had reached the decision after consulting a lawyer suggested by the Civil Liberties Union of B.C.

M. R. V. Storrow, the couple's lawyer, said a writ will be filed in the Supreme Court of B.C. early next week.

The four RCMP detectives are to be sued for "unlawful arrest and assault", the lawyer said.

Schuck said he had spoken earlier to another lawyer who advised him against the action because it would be too expensive and uncertain.

Sharon Schuck said they were advised they could apply for an internal police investigation but "we wouldn't know if anything was done about it."

ICBC APPEALING $285,000 AWARD

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government will appeal a supreme court judgment awarding a Kitimat woman $285,000 compensation for the death of her husband in a highway accident.

Notice of appeal was filed at Vancouver on grounds the award to Mrs. Anneke Hamburg and her infant son Rudi-Allen Hamburg was excessive.

The appeal seeks to have the award reduced or a new trial. The award was the largest ever against the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

Mrs. Anneke's husband Rudi was killed when a runaway highways department diesel roller crushed the car in which the couple was travelling.

Indian-Run Planes Ordered Down

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission Wednesday ordered an Indian-owned airline, based in Winnipeg, to stop operations immediately or face court prosecution.

The commission said it considers Anishenineo-Piminagan Inc. to be operating a commercial air service in violation of the Aeronautics Act.

Under federal law, commercial air carriers must be licensed.

Spokesmen for the Indian airline say it does not require a licence because it is a non-profit company and serves four Indian bands and the Metis community near Isand Lake, Man., not the general public.

The Indian airline operation has roused the ire of regular commercial operators in the area.

The transport commission questioned the legality of the Indian airline operation last week and asked the airline's lawyer to answer queries about the service.

A commission spokesman said the commission received a reply stating the lawyer was away and the questions had been sent to the airline's board of directors.

The commission said it has not yet instructed the RCMP to investigate the air line.

The Budworm Obsession

When someone speaks up for what he believes in, despite the opposition and criticism of friends and colleagues as well as opponents, we admire him for his fortitude and integrity. True to himself and his conscience, he is unwilling to cut his cloth merely to fit today's fashions. Independence of mind is an admirable quality.

But British Columbia's latest prophet crying in the wilderness, Forests Minister Tom Waterland, is becoming tedious and repetitious in his campaign to cram through his spruce budworm pesticide spraying program.

When the cabinet overruled him in May and decided that the spraying program — highly controversial because of its alleged detrimental effects on the health of people and animals — would not go ahead this year, Waterland publicly expressed his disapproval.

He said he was highly disappointed and stated that the spraying program should still go ahead. "Another year's damage to immature timber will have to be accepted in order to provide for appeal procedures to be set out in the new Pesticide Act," he said at the time.

On June 20, the forest service issued a press release over the minister's name distributing the views of a small group of people who live in the affected area. They said they were wholeheartedly in favor of the spraying program. "There's no danger to anybody at all," the forest service quoted a spokesman. To date the forest service, which answers to Waterland, has issued no press releases for those who oppose the program.

A week later Waterland's office sent forth more propaganda referring to the "budworm epidemic" along with photographs of signs his ministry has erected in the area. The pictures show people pointing across a highway up to a mountain, off stage left, as if a troop of Sasquatches or the blob that ate Tokyo was coming over the hill.

Then last Friday Waterland made his "let us spray" speech in the legislature, and yet another pitch for immediate dousing of the Fraser Canyon in sevin-4 oil and orthene pesticides.

The latest salvo came this week, as a mimeographed "letter to the editor" to B.C. newspapers from Weaterland which describes the damage to southern interior forests in language not seen since the destruction of Hiroshima.

They "are being devastated" by an infestation unequalled "in the recorded history of western Canada." More pictures — a budworm munching fir needles, a partially defoliated tree.

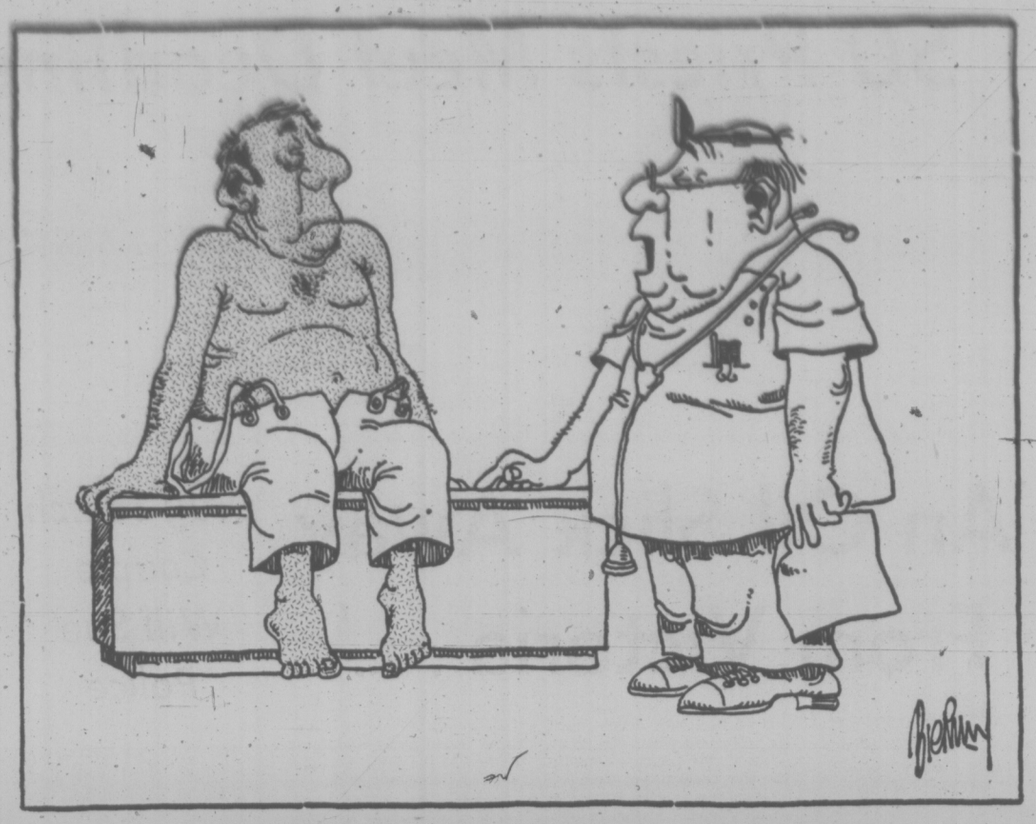
There's another fine old tradition in all of this — cabinet solidarity. As a newcomer, Waterland may not have heard of it but the tradition in the British parliamentary system is that cabinet decisions are collegial. One either goes along with what the majority decides, or one gets out and resigns on principle.

Waterland is doing neither. He continues to agitate for the pesticide spraying program, diametrically opposing government policy and highlighting his own powerlessness as minister of forests every time he opens his mouth.

If Waterland feels so strongly about it he should resign from cabinet and if he feels that strongly, as an MLA, to force a byelection on the issue. Otherwise he should stop scaring people with his weekly propaganda war, and keep his mouth closed.



"... your condition is rare in Victoria but not dangerous ... you have a sunburn ..."

Blatant Patronage

It remains perennially amazing how stupid politicians can be once they get into office. Not corrupt, not dishonest, just plain, garden-variety stupid.

Take, for instant, the latest case involving Education Minister Pat McGeer. (There are other previous cases involving McGeer one could cite if anyone wanted to dig them up.) This latest case, like most of the others, involves McGeer in his role as minister responsible for that peculiar Crown corporation, ICBC. The opposition in the legislature wants to know — and rightly so — just how one of McGeer's old buddies and political cronies, Ray Torresan, got for his advertising agency the lucrative job of doing PR and advertising for ICBC.

The opposition questions seem remarkably sensible in light of the fact that Torresan apparently got the job without competition, that another agency which had earlier won the job through a proper competition was bumped out to allow him in, and that ICBC management apparently had no say in the decision to use Torresan's agency, the decision being made solely by the board of directors.

It is as blatant a case of political patronage as could be found anywhere and as such is politically stupid. Torresan's agency may be highly competent; it may be as competent as, or even more competent than, the agency that did the work originally. But no one will ever believe it got the job for any reason except that Torresan was an old friend of McGeer's.

McGeer's main line of defence in the legislature seemed to be that Torresan had no long-term contract with ICBC. That is entirely irrelevant. If he is doing the work and getting paid for it, what does it matter if he has a contract or not?

It is well-accepted that patronage is a part of every government. But patronage that is so blatant and clumsy can do nothing but harm to the reputation of the minister and his government.

MAURICE WESTERN

Lawyers and the NDP

OTTAWA — The NDP, having become a grand old party, suffers at times from the afflictions peculiar to grand old parties. It has difficulty in confining its disagreements to the sacred precincts of caucus.

One of the more fascinating family squabbles of recent days is recorded in Hansard for July 14. The House was dealing with an amendment to the wiretap legislation proposed by Eldon Woolliams, the Conservative justice critic, and enthusiastically supported by Stuart Leggatt, NDP member for New Westminster. Its purpose was to protect the confidentiality of communications between solicitors and their clients.

Main Bout

As sometimes happens in these unfortunate encounters, notes of asperity crept into the exchanges. One or two samples are indicative. Leggatt referring to Arnold Peters, an erring colleague from Timiskaming: "But you're dumb." Peters (referring to Leggatt): "So touchy" Leggatt (on Max Saltsman's latest insurgency): "A tiny crack."

The main bout on the Thursday night card involved Leggatt, a distinguished lawyer, and Saltsman, the party's most experienced dissident. Both made very thoughtful speeches, the gist of which will be apparent from the following extracts:

Leggatt: "The motion before us deals with the legislative sanction the minister would give to the wiretapping of solicitors' offices. At first blush people may say, 'Oh, you lawyers are trying to protect yourselves.' The fact is the privilege associated with consultation is the privilege of the citizen. We want to make sure that every Canadian has the right to consult with someone in private without his conversation being overheard. People talk of the insidious growth of police power and the loss of the citizen's freedom ... I am proud to be a member of the legal profession because that profession is one of the last bulwarks remaining against encroachments of the police state."

It was Saltsman's argument that we have gone too far down the civil libertarian road at risk to our own security. He said:

"I think the time has come when society says that, precious as those absolute freedoms are, the need for security in our society is also important, and in fact the police have been hamstrung. We have gone too far in terms of preventing the police from doing their job. This is what needs to be faced openly. Just look at the dilemma: you cannot have both things at the same time. It is easy enough to say we are all for the police, we are all for security, we are all for civil liberties. We must make this decision. Trade-offs, never pleasant, popular or easy to make, must be made ..."

Matters were somewhat confused, however, by the entry of Peters, who supported the motion with arguments which appeared to damn it. He also observed that he was not concerned about the motion, explaining: "I think that both lawyers and clients are crooks, as certainly the court finds on occasion."

On reflection, Peters modified this judgment. "I think," he advised the House, "that some of the clients are guilty and some are not guilty."

The view from Timiskaming, as thus revised, seems entirely sound, at least up to a point. Peters did not amend his unfavorable opinion of lawyers. This seems unfortunate because the NDP nowadays is well endowed with lawyers; the present membership including such notables as Leggatt, Andrew Brewin and Gilbert.

It would be wrong to suggest that the debate was memorable only for these fraternal discords. Some of them are perhaps attributable to the zeal with which members nowadays plunge into their tasks of research. This emerges with clarity from another passage from Peters' speech reproduced here without the unhelpful interjections of other members.

Easy to Tap

"I have always suspected that many of the phones in this building were tapped, and there are reasons to think they were. That is a very easy thing to do. It was easy to tap telephones in the building for a long time because the lines ran through my office. To indicate how easy it was I attached my tape recorder on to them once and recorded a couple of conversations ..."

"I am trying to prove my point. I did not know whose conversations they were because I am not familiar with the telephone exchange system, but I am sure that after a couple of weeks of listening I could have found out. It is very easy to tap a telephone."

CLAUDE ADAMS

The Night N.Y. Went Black

NEW YORK — The man in the Second Avenue restaurant was talking gazpacho soup. His personal recipe, he insisted, was infinitely better than this gruelish mix before him, at $2.25 a bowl.

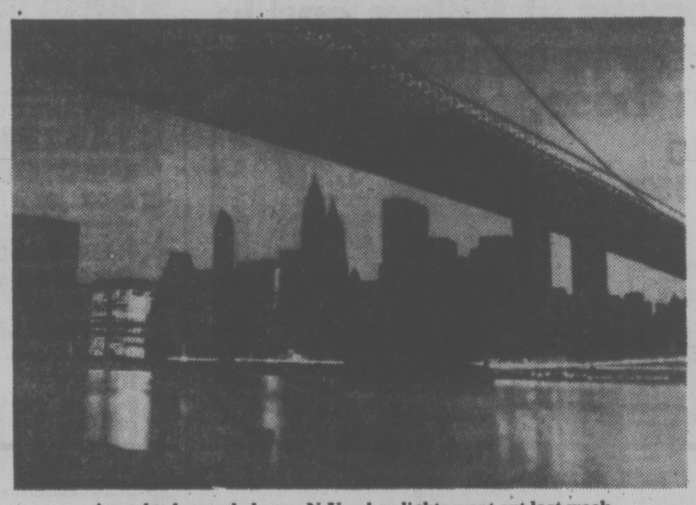
It was late afternoon, July 14. The city was gearing for its second night of looting and vandalism that everyone in blackout city knew was inevitable. The two Harlems, parts of the Bronx and sections of Brooklyn would surely blow up again.

The man, not without a certain social consciousness, shifted to a diagnosis of the American inner city and the lower classes, his reasoning as cool as the bowl of soup before him.

"In Canada," he said, "you do not have any definable lower class." He had once visited Montreal, and he knew a handful of Canadians. "Your class problems if you can call them that, are political. Ours are economic."

Within hours, gangs of black and Hispanic New Yorkers driven by what the man would call an "economic imperative" would return to the streets and pillage the auto showrooms and corner groceries and shoe stores and appliance shops they had missed the night before.

Nearly 4,000 would be arrested. Ten times as many, perhaps, would elude the beleaguered local and state police. There were reports that some looters were asking TV crews to keep their bright lights on so they could better see what they were stealing.



Anarchy descended upon N.Y. when lights went out last week.

Class Problems

One looter, laden with booty, told a policeman waving his pistol: "Look, man, you can shoot me for this stuff, or you can let me go. Take your pick." The cop, confronted by a profound moral dilemma, let him go.

There were many stories like this. Ir nearly all the cases, the commentators noted soberly, the looters were wrecking their own neighborhoods.

They don't rush into mid-town Manhattan and hit the banks," the man said over his gazpacho soup. "They go after the grocer to whom they owe a hundred bucks."

People you talk to here and in Washington like to echo the conclusions of the 1968 Kerner report on civil disorders, ordered by Lyndon Johnson after a series of urban riots.

"This is our basic conclusion," the report said. "Our nation is moving towards two societies, one black, one white — separate and unequal ..."

On a local basis, the armchair social scientists use phrases like "parallel cities." In practical terms, this means you can slurp your gourmet soups in relative safety while 10 blocks away, the neighborhoods are burning.

To a newcomer, watching wide-eyed, this is the aberration of the American dream.

But some analysts have a different judgment. "Why did it happen?" asks a nationally-syndicated newspaper columnist who usually writes clever and touching color pieces about "little people."

"There is hatred there," he answers himself, "A hatred of the system and everything that the system represents ..."

And he goes on "... they are telling us that they hate not only society, but that they hate themselves ... and when a people hate themselves they will do anything."

A waitress in midtown Manhattan says she used to feel sorry for the blacks and the Hispanics, but no more. "They don't wanna work, and they drive around in Cadillacs," she says, mouthing that most offensive of generalities.

Hate. Idleness. Self-destruction. Economic oppression. The politicians are keenly aware of the public mood. Poverty and joblessness are "no excuse for looting," says Sen. Jacob Javits of New York. Two candidates for the New York mayor's chair say that if society goes easy on the looters, it would obliterate the moral distinction between the good poor people and the destructive poor people.

Mario Cuomo, one of the top contenders for the mayor's job, makes a startling statement: "There are no more liberals — no liberals in the sense that they would spend a whole lot of time thinking about rehabilitation."

To someone not reared in the American experience, the cynicism and sheer callousness is appalling. Witness the blackout story headline in the Boston Herald-American the next day: "Massive Power Failure Hits New York and Disrupts TV. Losses of a billion-schmillion. No Kojak. No Mary Hartman."

Perfect Symbolism

A billion-schmillion, remarks the gazpacho man who has now proceeded to his prosciutto, is a drop in the bucket to a city with New York's fiscal blues. And tomorrow, he seems to be saying, we will all tilt back to our proper axis.

It is now after sunset. Electricity, and all its creature comforts have returned to midtown Manhattan. The business district and the hotels and the Park Avenue apartments and the singles bars and the theatres are back in business.

But past 77th Street, towards the most miserable sections of the city, it is still dark and will be for several more hours. There is a technical explanation for all this, of course, something about priorities and load capabilities and distribution problems. The "mom and pop" business operations, as Mayor Beame would later call them, would have to stand in line for a little longer, but be patient, Con Ed is working on it.

It is the most perfect bit of symbolism.

French Culture

It seems that the establishment here in Canada with all its various branches takes the problem of bilingualism quite seriously. And the more seriously this question is taken and discussed, the less a solution is apparent. So, why not take the whole matter somewhat less seriously and let's see if that question is as grave a threat to our country as the hot air artists in the parliament try to make us believe.

My own experience with French-Canadians is a mixed one. Living for many years in la belle province, I worked with the natives on various levels. I employed a number and found them good workmen. Some of them, if I asked to sign their names under the receipt for wages either made three crosses or called a school-age boy to sign their names. Naturally, these people spoke French only. Others were perfectly bilingual with an accent on a higher level of education, a very pleasant lot and well-skilled. These all are not interested whatsoever in politics and, like the others already mentioned without cultural background. The question of bilingualism and French culture was not on their itinerary.

The third lot, a minority, are well-established members of the business and educational community interested mainly (like everywhere else) in making money.

Only in these latter circles I found something resembling culture. But their culture (like money) can be considered more international than national. Those with excellent schooling and a good education can not be thrown together with the greater masses of Quebecois with no or doubtful education. Like the Gaspe French, their language is comparable with the language of the lowland French, the patois. It is a dialect of the 18th century.

This language was preserved from the time of their exodus from France and their immigration into Canada. This phenomenon has its parallel with other nationals like the Germans, who emigrated at about the same time to Russia, Hungary, Serbia etc. Unless you know their original dialects, you cannot understand their sayings. Also you may consider, that these earlier immigrants came from peasant stock with no cultural background to speak of.

So what is it all about — the French-Canadian culture?

Not that I would not like that two languages should be compulsory for every Canadian. In Switzerland they speak four languages. But does it tear apart that country? Real culture shows in being able to understand and to tolerate your neighbour, albeit he might be of a different color or different ethnic background.

To be intolerant is a sign only of weakness of the cause as well as of those who try to promote it. Premier Rene Levesque gives therewith his own evaluation. Bilingualism is a two way street. If Quebec asks that all be able to speak French, the Quebecois in turn also should be able to understand and to speak English. English is not only the national language of Canada, but also it is the language of international communication.

Most of the later immigrants coming to Canada speak up to three languages. Although they came under different circumstances, they brought with them the culture of their homeland, as displayed in national costumes, song and dances. What has Quebec to show? Alouette?

And if we look around the country we have two languages most anywhere. A traveller told me, landing in the prairie provinces, (probably Manitoba) that all directions at the airport were in two languages: English and Ukrainian. Probably they have now converted, like Victoria, these directions into graphic designs.

Last but not least, I might mention that there is not much danger with the new generation that English will be the omnipotent language to subdue French. As discussed in the media and otherwise, our graduates from high school can not express themselves coherently in English either, if they see fit to enter university. So what is all the fuss about?

This might appear to be written with tongue in cheek. But is it? —Waldo, Victoria.

Watch Out

The chips are down and the government has apparently given sanction to Alan Emery to compile information on how much gambling takes place in Victoria, and on the number of special licences issued each year for casino nights, bingo and lotteries. The government will probably then assail us with the amount of money made through having casino nights, bingos and lotteries. They are trying to sell us on the idea that we will all be made richer by a legalized gambling casino. There will be no mention of the by-products of gambling.

The by-products of gambling create lawlessness. We all know that, despite the fact that casinos are legalized by the government, they certainly can be undermined by front men posing as pillars of the community. We know that this farce is backed by wealth, and these men serve as a transmission belt through which the tactics of the underworld move into our society, our economy, our political life, our law enforcement.

To the citizens of British Columbia I now say: Be on guard! Watch out! Or we are going to have a casino stuffed down our unwilling throats and be choked to death, by our money-mad government! Oh British Columbia, I stand on guard for thee! — Vicky, Sooke.

Carter Shields Soviet Spying

By GEORGE WILL
Washington Post

Leonid Brezhnev knows human rights as Pasteur knew diseases: from combating the spread of them. He considers it rude of U.S. President Jimmy Carter to comment on the absence of such rights in the Soviet Union. But Brezhnev must approve of Carter's reticence about Soviet violations of the Fourth Amendment privacy rights of Americans.

The Soviet Union is intercepting millions of telephone conversations of public and private U.S. citzens. But Carter, like his immediate predecessors, seems so committed to extending the sour season of detente that he will not stop this violation of the only human rights that are his direct responsibility.

High on Hill

Most long-distance calls are transmitted by microwaves. Soviet representatives in Washington and other U.S. locations use sophisticated equipment (brought here in unopened crates under the expanded privilege of the "diplomatic pouch") to gather microwave transmissions from the air. Later, significant conversations are culled by computers of the kind sold to the Soviet Union.

Soon the Soviets will build a new embassy on one of the highest hills in Washington. As a rule, the higher you are, the more you can intercept.

The United States has a limited ability to intercept communications in Moscow because of Soviet countermeasures (including the microwave bombardment of the U.S. embassy), the location of the embassy and the fact that the Soviets use fewer microwave transmissions. Besides, the United States is primarily seeking information of the sort the Soviets can gather without electronics in our open society.

By (in effect) wiretapping million of American conversations, the Soviets gather much military and other intelligence, including economic data from, for example, bankers, grain brokers and commodity exchanges, thereby making possible memorable grain deals.

The Carter administration is devising a "secret plan" to protect classified conversations. But the Fourth Amendment does not say that only senior government officials shall be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures. This plan may cost a billion dollars.

Detente Concern

The president should understand that it would be less expensive, in dollars and dignity, and would be more efficjent and more in accord with his oath of office, to square his shoulders and tell the Soviets to desist. The United States would have to stop its limited intercepting in Moscow. But the trade-off would be a rarity — one advantageous to the United States.

The New York Times reports that Secretary of State Kissinger "opposed disclosure of the Soviet eavesdropping because it might harm relations and block the policy of detente." President Nixon was notoriously unimpressed by the Fourth Amendment. Under President Ford, foreign policy was in Kissinger's custody, and Kissinger was in what G.K. Chesterton called "the clean, well-lit prison of one idea." The idea was that nothing must complicate the thoroughly synthetic atmosphere of detente.

'Disguise Retreat'

The Carter administration has continued the coverup, refusing even to alert Americans to the sweeping Soviet invasion of their privacy. This refusal, says Senator Daniel Moynihan (Dem.—N.Y.) "conforms entirely to other manifestations of what I have felt to be . . . a failure of nerve on the part of Americans facing the mounting aggressions and arrogance of Soviet power."

"Not long ago," says Moynihan, "a White House official, commenting on the impact of President Carter's human rights initiative on Soviet-American relations, stated what few have said but many have known, which is that the Soviet Union has regarded American policy over the past decade — until, that is, the present administration — as one of disguised retreat.

. . . 'failure of nerve'

"What better evidence would they have than the behavior of our government in this particular matter? Here we are standing around the Rose Garden pinning medals on one another for having discovered that the FBI is tapping somebody's telephone, while secretly aware but unwilling to state that the Soviet Union is doing the same thing on a scale of what?—100,000 to one? . . . All I ask is a single standard. The American government must not commit crimes against its own peope. Neither must it allow foreign governments to do so."

If the administration's policy is volubility about Ethiopian offences against Ethiopians but reticence about Soviet offences against Americans, then the administration deserves Bismarck's description of Lord Salisbury: "Wood painted to look like iron."

U.S. Drowning In Paper Sea

By JOHN PICTON
The Globe and Mail

WASHINGTON — Paperwork, paperwork, paperwork. The U.S. bureaucracy is overwhelming the country with it.

So bad has the demand become for the U.S. government to be run in duplicate and triplicate that a U.S. commentator recently described it as "a clear and present danger to our freedom, our prosperity, our inventiveness and even our sanity."

It has been estimated that individuals and businesses are spending time and money to a total value of $100 billion a year just to fill out federal forms.

William Rickenbacker, a financial writer, has demonstrated that the cost in man-hours of completing U.S. income tax returns alone exceeds $21 billion annually.

The Library of Congress has judged the annual cost to large and small businesses of filling out millions of federal forms as being $40 billion, while another $40 billion is spent every year by companies carrying out federal regulations.

To this, say opponents of paper shuffling, must be added the even larger cost of paying, equipping and pensioning-off the bureaucrats — and it has been estimated that every $100 billion, if diverted to new plant and equipment, would create almost three million permanent jobs in private industry.

Says the commentator: "The sum total is an American society that has visibly slowed down, that lags in the creation of new products and new jobs, that increasingly displays the neurosis associated with the alienated who have lost control of their own activities."

He adds: "This is not to say that the bureaucracy and its works are not often beneficial and sometimes indispensable.

"But we have reached the point where its ballooning cost and petrifying effect must be measured against its declining usefulness."

Case histories from the files of the Commission on Federal Paperwork show the inhibiting effect that the bureaucracy has on U.S. society.

When Representative Olin Teague of Texas bought $4.91 worth of government stationery, the General Services Administration billed him by enclosing eight copies of a form, six copies of a computer printout and two computer punch cards.

The cost of billing, he concluded, was worth more than the order.

Wyoming turned down several federal grants (worth $108,000) last year after the state calculated that it would have cost more than that to complete the federal paperwork involved.

And the beat goes on.

A peanut farmer in Georgia (not President Jimmy Carter) last year filed an application for a small-business loan. It cost him more than $6,000 in fees to lawyers and auditors, and took seven pounds of paper before the Small Business Administration was satisfied.

Then there was the case of the Federal Power Commission sending out computerized questionnaires to U.S. utilities demanding the latitude and longitude of every gas meter in the United States.

As well, the utilities were told to re-measure all pipes on the inside rather than the outside.

Those requirements were quietly dropped when the paperwork commission found out about them.

And what about the drug company that had to collect and file 120,000 pages of information with the Food and Drug Administration — in triplicate, of course — before it could market a drug for arthritis?

And the railway which, after waiting 10 years for government approval of a merger that would have saved the line, went bankrupt just before approval was given?

Bert Lance, new director of the office of management and budget, has vowed to cut through the paper mire.

However, even if Mr. Carter is elected for a second term, he has only 7½ years left in which to do it.

Young Indians 'Set for Battle' In U.S.

By MARK FRANKLAND
London Observer

ALBERQUERQUE, New Mexico — Travelling through the American West, the first Navajo Indian I met was a young man called Robert Tohe. He wore blue jeans and a pink shirt with white spots whose gaiety was absolutely contradicted by the gravity of his manner. He had gold-rimmed spectacles and his hair was in a long tail at the back in the traditional manner. His face had the sadness of a wood carving. His manner towards an inquisitive white journalist was polite but restrained.

You do not have to know much about the history and present condition of the American Indian to understand that Indians are bound to be cautious in their dealings with outsiders. Tohe was one of the small but growing elite of young, educated Indians. He had studied engineering at the university of New Mexico and was now working with the National Indian Youth Council, a private organization that tries to help and educate young Indians.

The Navajos are the biggest of the Indian tribes in America and one of Tohe's concerns was to help oppose plans to build America's first coal gasification plant (and an immense strip mine to feed it) in the northeast corner of the Navajo reservation. The reservation covers over 12 million acres of New Mexico, Arizona and Utah.

Conversations with Tohe and other young Indians suggest that a string of difficult crises are to be expected in Indian relations with the United States. The confrontation in 1973 at Wounded Knee, South Dakota, between members of the Radical American Indian Movement and the U.S. government, the latter more or less supported by the older Indian leaders, seems likely to be repeated in one way or another.

There are only a million American Indians, so how is it, it might be asked, that they can have the power to cause so much trouble?

One reason is that, though there may not be many Indians, they have on their reservations a great deal of the natural resources that the rest of America needs. Gerald Wilkinson, a Cherokee who is director of the National Indian Youth Council, claims that "Indians have one third of all the strippable coal, one third of the known uranium, and in all one quarter of the known energy resources in the country."

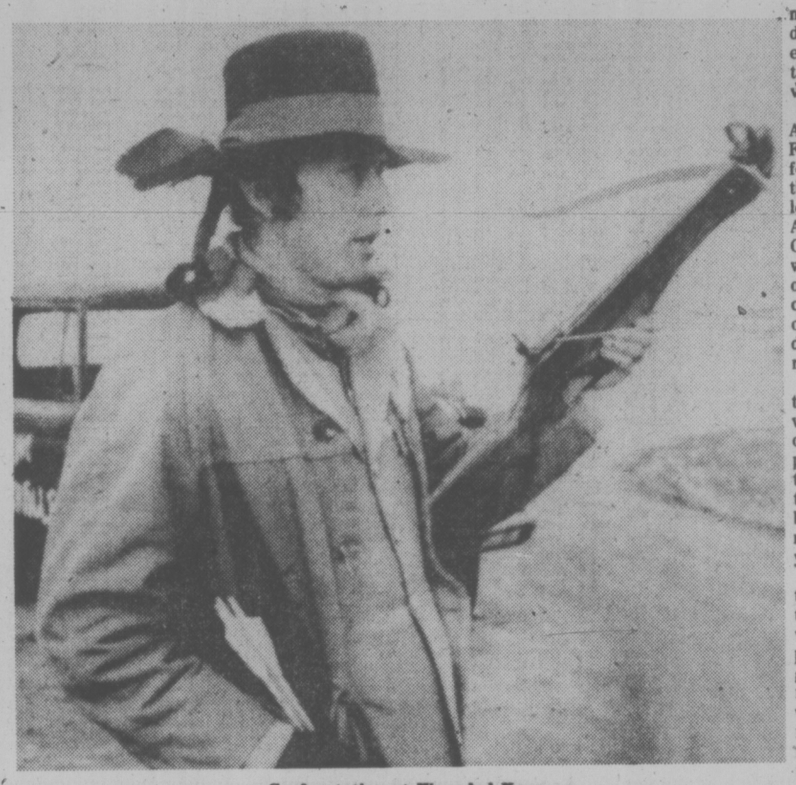
The exact figures may be in dispute, but that the Indians own a lot of valuable minerals is not. However many Indian treaties the American whites may have broken, the Indians are the undoubted legal possessors of potential riches (they also have solid legal claims to a good deal of land now occupied by whites. Legal actions on this score are causing worry in eastern states.)

What is happening is that young Indians, trained in the white American university system, are coming back to their reservations with a far clearer idea than any previous generation of what they want for their people and of how to deal with white America. Their numbers are still small. There are only a few hundred Navajo graduates out of a tribe of one hundred thousand. There are only seven or eight Navajo lawyers. But these young people seem to agree that they must somehow take control of their own development.

This means not rushing into new agreements with big companies that want to exploit the resources on Indian land. "There should be a moratorium on industries coming into the reservations," Robert Tohe said. "Then within 15 to 20 years we shall be able to handle the technology ourselves, if that's what the tribes decide they want."

This attitude is bringing the new breed of educated Indians into contact with the tribal councils (the Indian legislatures), most of whose members have only a few years schooling. This conflict was evident at Wounded Knee and it is showing up again in the argument among Navajos about whether to allow more strip mining and other exploitation of their land.

The young Indians say that tribal elders suffer from a "colonial mentality." Many were elected, according to Gerald Wilkinson, because it makes sense "to pick a guy who can get along with the federal bureaucracy and the non-Indians." The younger Indians are worrying both their elders and the whites because they are not impressed by the values of white America.



Confrontation at Wounded Knee

Although Indians were given American citizenship after the First World War, in which they fought with notable bravery, this young generation is challenging many of the things America holds most dear. Christianity for one thing, which they see as destructive of their identity: "The churches," I was told, "have in one way or another tried to destroy Indian culture and religion." Money is another.

A young Navajo official talked about a white American who had advised the Navajos on mineral rights in the 1950s, paving the way for coal contracts which have not contributed much to Navajo well-being. "He was a typical money hungry American," the young Navajo said.

Can they do it? Can they turn the Indian reservations into little foreign lands where the values of white America do not penetrate? They would not be giving up much because on the reservations the white man's way of life is all too often represented in the shoddiest, most slummy way. Whatever their chances, these young Indians seem set on a battle.

Civil Rights for Aged?

By HOBART ROWEN
Washington Post

Anita Bryant notwithstanding, the United States is moving slowly but perceptibly toward assuring civil rights for homosexuals. It has also come a long way toward guaranteeing civil rights for blacks, Chicanos, women and other minorities.

So how about civil rights for the older person in American society? Congressman Claude Pepper argues that "age-ism is as odious as sexism or racism." He is co-author of two bills before the House of Representatives that would retain for the individual the option of whether he or she wants to retire at a given age. "The 1980s," predicts Jack Osofsky of the National Council on The Aging, "will be the civil rights decade for older pople."

It is as much an economic as a civil rights issue because mandatory retirement at age 65 tends to waste an important resource. People are living longer, and medical science assures that increasing numbers of aged persons will be in relatively good health.

To add strength and viability to the U.S. Social Security system, says former administrator Robert Ball, "we had better give high priority over the next 30 years — before the crunch comes — to reversing the trend toward earlier and earlier retirement."

Pepper, chairman of a House select committee on aging, and private groups representing the elderly, of course want to see action now, not 20 or 30 years down the road. They argue persuasively that enforced separation from an active work status should be based on a person's competence — ability to perform — rather than automatically on attainment of a given age.

Legislation now on the books bars discrimination in the private sector, because of age, only for those 40 through 64, and in the federal government through the age of 70. (There are some exceptions, as for airline pilots, where even earlier retirement can be forced. Mandatory retirement where it is a condition of a bona fide pension plan is also exempted.)

Pepper, along with Rep. Paul Findley (Rep-Ill.), has proposed eliminating the age limits, and retaining the basic exceptions. It would mean that someone 65 or over could not be given a pink slip just because of age. Legislation adding "age" to the Civil Rights Act banning discrimination for "race, color, religion, sex or national origin" is also being discussed.

Nelson Cruikshank, at 75 just appointed by President Jimmy Carter as his chief adviser on aging problems, when asked by this reporter, said he thought doing away completely with the mandatory 65-year retirement rule might be "simplistic."

Cruikshank (himself living proof that age is no test of competence) thinks that union negotiators can use the 65-year age limit "as a trade-off for decent pensions." Besides, Cruikshank argues, retirement policy can't be made in a vacuum, but must be related to the conditions in the labor market.

"What might make sense at full employment might be lousy with eight or nine per cent out of work," he observed.

Some also argue that mandatory retirement of the elderly opens up slots that may be needed for younger persons. Osofsky, a private lobbyist for the aging, demurs. "You can't use the needs of one part of the population to take care of others," he says.

There's a lot of emotion attached to the issue, Cruikshank acknowledges. "I'd rather think of 65 as the beginning of the age of benefits, rather than the age of retirement," he says.

In recent years, employers have tended to emphasize compulsory retirement at 65, coincident with federal tax encouragement of pension plans. Ball suggests that without compulsory retirement, there is no sure way in which a company can develop new executive leadership for its long-term future.

But Pepper's contention that any given retirement age is arbitrary, undermining the mental health and outlook of the retiree, is sure to get increasingly serious attention in industry. Many companies are taking a new look at the economic implications of booting people out of their jobs, just because of age.

It is clear that under present rules, with an aging population, the percentage of people paying into the Social Security system, compared to those taking the money out, will decline dramatically. More money is going to have to be put into the system. One way of easing that burden on corporate and individual taxpayers is to encourage people to stay on the job longer, instead of — quite literally — "severing" them as the calendar ticks off the 65th birthday.

Foundations Shaky Anew For Developing Nations

WASHINGTON (CP) — Developing countries already suffering from high oil prices, general inflation and shaky commodity revenues saw their financial foundations further weakened last year when the flow of money from richer countries edged downward.

Recent statistics from the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) show that the net financial flow to the developing countries eased to $39.5 billion last year from $39.9 billion in 1975.

That reversed a trend that had seen the flow jump from $10.7 billion a decade earlier as the industrialized countries made a sustained effort to combat world poverty.

In 1975, the industrialized countries reached the goal of sending one per cent of their gross national product (GNP) to the developing countries. But that declined to 0.95 per cent of GNP in 1976.

Perhaps more seriously for the developing countries, the GNP percentage devoted to official development aid dropped to 0.33 from 0.36.

Official development aid is only one-third of the flow of financial resources, but it is crucial to many countries because 89 per cent of such aid is in the form of grants. Also, such aid is concentrated in poorer countries while the private loan and investment share of financial flows goes mainly to developing countries with stronger economies.

The drop in percentage of GNP devoted to official development aid left the donors less than halfway to the target of 0.7 per cent. Only three countries last year were above the level of 0.7 per cent of GNP being devoted to official development aid: the Netherlands and Sweden at 0.82 and Norway at 0.71.

Canada had risen to 0.56 per cent in 1975, when it provided $880 million (U.S.) in official development aid. But that fell to 0.47 per cent last year when Canada provided $886 million.

Commenting on the Canadian figures, the International Monetary Fund said later the decline in GNP percentage resulted from disbursement delays rather than policy decisions to cut foreign aid.

Other major percentage declines came in aid from Australia, Austria, Belgium, West Germany and New Zealand.

Since 1973, oil-producing countries have become a significant source of foreign aid in addition to the industrialized countries, but their financial flow also declined last year, to $7.5 billion from $8.1 billion.

The increasing balance-of-payments problems being faced by the developing countries are being attacked on several fronts, but most economists agree that the basic solution is for the industrialized countries to import more goods from the developing states.

Such increased imports would add to balance-of-payments problems faced by most industrialized countries and likely would anger protectionists.

The alternative, however, may well be worsening poverty and growing political instability in the Third World.

Home Oil Deal Scrutiny Urged

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto and American stock exchanges have asked for a third-party evaluation of assets involved in a deal between Home Oil Co. Ltd. and its controlling shareholder, Consumers' Gas Co. of Toronto.

The transaction involves all proved and exploration properties of Consumers' Gas in Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. The companies last month announced that the properties are to be transferred to Home Oil, based in Calgary.

Under the agreement, the properties are valued at about $20 million. Home Oil is paying for the properties by issuing more non-voting class A shares valued at $31.25 each.

Ronald Coleman, senior vice-president of the Calgary company, said terms of the deal were based on an evaluation of the properties by consultants hired by Consumers' Gas and by Home Oil's staff.

Home Oil's shares are listed on the American and Toronto exchanges. The proposed issue of new treasury shares is subject to approval by the exchanges.

Coleman said he expects that "the situation would only change materially if the consultants' report came in with a figure considerably below our own findings."

"We are trying to build Home Oil into a substantial Canadian-owned company and toward this objective we have to utilize all means at our disposal—cash flow, borrowing and shares," he said.

"At this time, the issue of shares seemed to be the most appropriate way of concluding the transaction."

Buried Cable Route On Seven Streets

B.C. Hydro has awarded a contract go build 6,000 feet of concrete ductwork for underground wiring in midtown Victoria.

Chew Excavating will start on the $400,000 project immediately and be finished about mid-October.

Streets affected will be Nanaimo Street from the Horsey substation to Market Street east to Blanshard, then to Hillside, Dovler Place, Caledonia and east to Vancouver Street.

Hydro said today excavation work for the needed trench will be done with as little disruption as possible to those along the route.

The concrete duct bank to be poured in the trench will hold 16 pipes or ducts carrying 12,000-volt feeder lines.

Poland Pardons Many Prisoners

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Pardons were declared Tuesday for all persons serving less than one year in prison for lesser offenses or misdemeanors, as a gesture to mark Poland's national day July 22. Also qualifying for a pardon will be women over 50, men over 60, juveniles or sole family supporters sentenced up to three years in prison, general prosecutor Witold Rozwens said. He added that the amnesty does not apply to members of the dissident Committee for the Defence of Workers.

'Zombie' Break-Ins Net a Year

A Nanaimo man, who acted "like a zombie" in breaking into two business places in February, was sentenced in Victoria county court Wednesday to a year in prison.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart expressed sympathy for Lawrence Earle Duggan, who earlier pleaded guilty to two counts of breaking and entering with intent to commit an indictable offence.

But he observed that the offences took place while the accused was on probation and that he had failed to co-operate with his probation officer.

Stewart agreed Duggan had been strongly influenced by alcohol and that there had been no threat of injury involved. However, "society can't carry on unless there is some protection for property rights as well as personal rights," he said.

Counsel had suggested leniency because of the role played by alcohol and medication Duggan was taking for serious head and back injuries received in 1974 in an industrial accident, which had caused him continuing pain, insomnia and inability to perform his old occupation as an ironworker.

His wife described Duggan's behavior at the time as being "like a zombie," and counsel suggested he was not thinking clearly enough to appreciate that he could be seen by people driving past.

The premises entered were Metwood Industries Ltd. and High Tree Services Ltd. at Cassidy, just south of Nanaimo.

Court was told Duggan had tried to receive help from Workers' Compensation, but had run into difficulty and become frustrated because of the time elasped since suffering injury. He subsequently required surgery on his spine but had been unable to get compensation.

"I would think Workers' Compensation is there to help him," Stewart commented.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Five persons have been placed on $1,000 peace bond for a year in connection with a May 15 fracas at a Quadra Street parking lot, involving about 40 people.

Three of the five, 38-year-old Kewal Singh Purewal and his 19-year-old son Raginder Singh Purewal, both of 3996 Gordon Head Road, and 32-year-old Tirath Singh Samaron, 346 West Burnside, put up the $1,000 peace bond voluntarily Wednesday in Victoria provincial court.

But the other two, 21-year-old Gurbakash Sihota, 3473 Bethune, and 30-year-old Jasbir Bains, 857 Marigold, disputed the unusual proceedings which were launched by Det.-Const. Kenneth Dibden of the Victoria city police.

Although the procedure is not in the Criminal Code of Canada, Dibden charged them under a common-law charge that he had reasonable and probable grounds to believe the five men would breach the peace.

The five were among about 15 persons from the East Indian community who began fighting in the Safeway Disco parking lot shortly after a movie at the Fox Theatre. The brawl required police from Victoria and Saanich to attend before order was restored.

During the lengthy hearing before Judge Harold Alder, crown counsel Armand Petronio said the fracas was the result of a long-standing family feud between the Purewals and Samaron on one side and Shiota and Bains on the other.

Bains testified that he was simply trying to split up the parties in the dispute.

After hearing arguments on both sides, Alder imposed the same order for peace bonds as accepted by the Purewals and Samron earlier and also imposed the same one-year term.

Remmert Radsma, 18, of 1300 Yates Street, was fined $400 after changing his plea to guilty on a charge of dangerous driving.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told Judge Blake Allan that Victoria city police spotted Radsma at about 9:30 p.m. April 29 heading west on Richardson at about 45 m.p.h. During the ensuing chase, Radsma went through two stop signs and reached speeds of more than 80 m.p.h. before doing a 180-degree turn upon braking.

A 24-year-old man who pleaded to his third charge of possession of stolen property this year was given a six-month sentence by Allan.

Monty Rick Jones pleaded guilty to having stolen necklaces from the T. Eaton's store when he was checked in the 1500-block Government by Victoria city police Tuesday morning.

Mulligan told the court Jones was sentenced to three months for the same charge Jan. 24 and was placed on a year's probation. On May 17, Jones was given concurrent three-month terms for possession of stolen property and theft under $200 and was also placed on 18 months probation.

Mulligan also informed the court that Jones had just been released from prison prior to the latest incident.

An 18-year-old who ran away from Oak Bay police July 6 and was arrested at his home two or three hours later was fined a total of $425.

William Nicholas Munroe Chadwick, 1972 Fairfield, pleaded guilty to refusing a breath test demand and driving without a licence.

Court was told Chadwick was stopped in the 2100-block Cadboro Bay Road because of erratic driving. As he was being taken to the police car, Mulligan said, Chadwick ran away.

Defence-lawyer Dean Smith told the judge that Chadwick's act was "rash and unthinking" and not a premeditated one.

Allan levied a $400 fine for the refusal to take the breath test and $25 for driving without a valid driver's licence. A charge of impaired driving was dropped by Mulligan.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were John Napier Russell, 30, of 837 Ellery, $600; Timothy William Rogers, 38, of 3164 Ayton Place, $300; Ruth McDougall, 52, of 586 Toronto, $50, and Albert Remie Degendt, 61, of 3035 Tilli-

In addition, Degendt was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work.

Barber Urges Foot Patrols By Policemen

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber has urged the Victoria police board to bring back police foot patrols in the city's residential neighborhoods.

In a letter to the chairman, Mayor Mike Young, and board members Barber says the policeman on the neighborhood beat is "an old-fashioned idea whose time has come again," to combat Victoria's rising crime rate.

Referring to the recent spate of robberies and assaults, Barber says businessmen are concerned, many elderly residents are afraid to venture on the streets at night and some younger people feel "considerable alienation" from area police forces.

Foot patrols would offer "a visible and friendly presence," he says, and allow the officers concerned to become acquainted with a neighborhood's citizens, activities and problems.

"More importantly, there's something very worthwhile in a kid growing up knowing the neighborhood cop, and the cop being able to recognize every kid on the block."

SLICKEST SNIPER in Western Lacrosse Association game Wednesday night at Memorial Arena was Victoria veteran Ron MacNeil (right), who watches ball (arrow) bulge net behind New Westminster goaltender Ted Gernaey in third period. Grover and MacNeil Lift Rocks Close to Leaders

Ron MacNeil and George Grover came up with standout efforts Wednesday as Victoria Shamrocks clipped New Westminster Salmonbellies 17-10 before a crowd of about 1,000 in Memorial Arena to clinch second place in the Western Lacrosse Association.

MacNeil scored six goals and assisted on three others and Grover had a near-flawless performance in goal during the last two periods after relieving Larry Smeltzer.

Victoria has two games remaining in the 24-game schedule, July 27 against league-leading Vancouver Burrards at Memorial and July 30 against the Timbermen in Nanaimo.

Nanaimo, eliminated from playoff contention last month, nipped visiting Coquitlam Adanacs 11-10 in the other Wednesday game.

Shamrocks got off to a fast start and led 5-2 at one point but Salmonbellies rallied to knot the count 7-7 going into the second period.

MacNeil scored three goals, including one short-handed effort, in the first period and then pounded in two more, 28 seconds apart, in the last minute of the middle frame as the Irish regained an 11-9 edge.

The Royal City squad got one back early in the third period but MacNeil whipped in his 38th goal of the season and last of the game to restore the two-goal margin.

From then on, it was Victoria all the way and Shamrocks scored five more times in less than 10 minutes to put the victory away.

Ranjit Dillon and Dave Thompson added two goals each to the Victoria total and singles were contributed by Gerry Cadwallader, Pete Rushton, Norm Baker, Dan Green, Bill Marechek, Dave Lowden and Ivan Thompson.

Wayne Goss, who will serve the two-game suspension handed down earlier this week by WLA commissioner Roy Burton during games against Vancouver and Nanaimo, led the Salmonbellies with three goals and four assists.

The New Westminster squad fired 22 of their 37 shots in the last two frames against Grover, who was only beaten three times.

At Nanaimo, Kevin Alexander fired three goals to lead the Timbermen to a second straight victory over Adanacs. Ian Kennedy added two goals and single tallies were scored by Mike Walsh, Rick Baker, Jim Lynch, Bob Avender, Brian Evans and Randy Noble.

Jim Aitchison, Brian Law and Randy Bryan scored two goals each for Coquitlam, which outshot Nanaimo 66-51 and split 12 minutes in penalties with the home team in a peaceful game.

Politicians Make Move To Avoid Soccer Strike

LONDON (AP) — England's professional soccer players are threatening a strike that would stop the opening of the English League season in four weeks.

Members of Parliament stepped in Wednesday to try to head off the stoppage. They have talked to the players' leaders and invited league officials to give the clubs' side of the quarrel.

The players demand an end to a rule which binds them to their clubs even after their contract is finished.

Under the league rules, they cannot play for another team until a transfer has been legally concluded. And clubs refuse to transfer players without a fee.

Cliff Lloyd, secretary of the Professional Footballers' Association, the players' union, said: "We have exhausted the machinery available to us, and it leaves us with no alternative but to go to our members, inform them of the dispute and to take whatever action they consider necessary to end the impasse."

The players have long campaigned for a change in the rules governing their contracts and transfers. But last month, at the league's annual meeting, the clubs refused to change anything.

The rules have remained basically unchanged since professional soccer began in England 100 years ago.

When a contract ends, and a player or his club does not wish to renew it, he has to wait until the club has worked out a transfer deal with another club.

Transfer fees between clubs range between a few hundred and 300,000 pounds. The player gets 10 per cent unless he has asked for the transfer himself, in which case he gets nothing.

If the club demands a transfer fee that nobody will pay, the player has to stay out of league football.

Loyd saind: "We are trying to implement the right of a player, once he has fulfilled his contractual obligations, to be in a position either to renegotiate a contract or, alternatively, to join another club of his choice on the understanding that in the event of his deciding to leave, the club is compensated for the loss of his services."

Tom Pendry, a Labor MP, said he had talked to the players' leaders and thought their case is reasonable.

"We would like to hear the other side," Pendry said, "and we have invited members of the league management committee to meet us."

Marilyn Leading By Two Strokes

CALGARY (CP) — Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver fired a windswept 76 Wednesday and carried a two-shot lead into today's final round of the Alberta women's golf championship.

Betty Cole of Edmonton, 12-time provincial champion who won last year, shot a three-over-par 77.

Palmer's 36-hole total was 150 while Cole settled for 152. Provincial junior champion Jackie Davies of Edmonton shot 76 to claim third place with a 158 total.

Schaufele Sparks Hampton Victory

Doug Schaufele made his mark both at the plate and in the field Wednesday while helping Hampton to a 5-4 decision over American in Greater Victoria Little League baseball championship action at Sidney Park.

Schaufele singled in Paddy Wyman, who had walked and advanced on a passed ball, for what turned out to be the winning run in the fifth inning.

He also hit a double and another single during the game and saved a run during a double play in the fith by catching a fly in left field and throwing out a runner attempting to score.

Dave Calder helped the Hampton effort with a two-run triple.

Russ Courtnall, the losing pitcher, was two-for-three and Ian Lamplugh was three-for-four for American.

The six-team, double-loss-elimination tourney continues tonight with Gordon Head and Triangle meeting in a winners' bracket game at 6:30.

Trifecta Snaps Payoff Record

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A record $27,286 was paid to a trifecta ticket holder in the feature race Wednesday night at the Atlantic City Race Course. The payoff broke the track's former mark of $24,414 set in 1972, track officials said.

John's Other John won the nine-horse race, and paid $24.20, $9 and $5. Misty Emperor returned $7.60 and $5.20 and Traveling Free paid $14.

Turnovers Help Lions Clobber Roughriders

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders' coach Jim Eddy suggested he will make changes soon if his Western Football Conference team does not improve its dismal showing following a 34-14 whipping by British Columbia Lions Wednesday.

The Roughriders, who have lost and looked inept in their first two starts following four successive pre-season losses, fell behind 20-0 in the first quarter and did not launch any real threat of a rally.

The Lions, surprising winners of their first two games, concentrated on preventing quick Saskatchewan scores. They succeeded admirably, despite giving up 421 yards in net offence.

Quarterback Jerry Tagge used rookie tight end Richard Appleby as his primary target in the first-period blitz. Appleby scored once on a 41-yard pass and later gained 69 yards to set up a four-yard scoring run by Mike Strickland.

Rookie defensive back Doug Carlson rambled 88 yards after a fumble by Molly McGee for the other B.C. touchdown. Lui Passaglia completed the Lions scoring with four field goals, three converts and a single.

McGee scooted two yards for the first Saskatchewan touchdown and Steve Molnar took a 63-yard scoring strike from Ron Lancaster for the other. Lancaster hit Bob Richardson for a two-point convert, but missed on the second attempt.

Lancaster and Eric Guthrie completed 29 of 47 passes for 283 yards, while Tagge, replaced late in the game by Gary Keithley, was good on 15 of 24 attempts for 240 yards.

B.C. head coach Vic Rapp said he believes Saskatchewan is just in a slump, but Eddy was not so sure.

"From what I saw, maybe there's a need for personnel changes," said Eddy. "Six turnovers is ridiculous.

"We had multiple breakdowns everywhere."

Saskatchewan got more bad news when offensive lineman Joe Miller broke his hand. He stayed in the game until the fourth quarter when he was replaced by designated import Carl Roaches.

B.C. lost defensive end Jesse O'Neal early in the game. The former Saskatchewan starter said he aggravated an ailing ankle. It was not known how long he would be out.

Despite the adjustments forced by O'Neal's absence, Rapp was happy with his defensive team.

"We got momentum early," he said. "After that, our defence came up big when it had to."

One of the bright moments for the B.C. defensive team came in the second quarter with the Lions leading 24-0. McGee was hauled down close to the goal line and Lancaster's third-down gamble, a pass into the end zone, was foiled.

McGee, leading rusher for either team with 97 yards in 15 carries, was restricted to 76 yards on 13 pass receptions. Lancaster's only long completion was the touchdown bomb to Molnar.

B.C. defensive back Grady Cavness and linebacker Sam Cvijanovich, both standouts, were banished along with Saskatchewan guard Mike Dirks following a brief scrap in the fourth quarter.

Record Soccer Crowds

NEW YORK (AP) — The North American Soccer League has set a season attendance record, passing the 2.5 million mark with three weeks to go in the season.

Through games of Sunday, July 17, the NASL had drawn a total of 2,565,153 spectators, breaking the previous record of 2,474,078 set last year. The NASL is averaging 13,501 fans a game, an increase of 31 per cent over a comparable period last year.

New York Cosmos remain the top drawing team in the league with an average attendance of 33,024, although Minnesota Kicks are close behind at 32,133.

Wednesday's scores:

Connecticut 2, Chicago 1.
Tampa Bay 3, Portland 2.
Seattle 3, Rochester 0.
Fort Lauderdale 2, Las Vegas 1.

Coach of Als Irked By 'Dirty Football'

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Marv Levy of Montreal Alouettes was agitated despite his Eastern Football Conference team's 16-10 victory Wednesday night over Toronto Argonauts.

"That was a dirty damn football team we played here tonight and I'm not afraid to say so," Levy growled. "I think the Argo coaching staff should do something about it."

Levy was referring to several incidents, including a late hit by Argos defensive back Paul Bennett on Joe Barnes that forced the Alouettes quarterback out of the game. Bennett was ejected from the game as a result.

"He (Bennett) jumped on my ribs," Barnes said. "And considering that I was hit there earlier by linebacker Gord Knowlton, I thought I was finished.

"But he apologized after the game and said it wasn't intentional. I appreciate that."

Levy said he didn't think the Argos had a pre-game plan to hit Barnes, but added, "It was a disservice to the game of football."

Barnes turned in a solid performance, however, scrambling for 95 of the Alouettes 172 yards in rushing and firing a second-quarter touchdown pass to Peter Dalla Riva. Don Sweet converted the touchdown and added the other nine Montreal points on three field goals.

The Alouettes, in first place with two wins and no losses, completely stymied an inept Toronto offence, holding the Argos to three field goals and a single by Zenon Andrusyshyn.

The game, played before a crowd of 47,320 in sweltering 30-degree heat, was the home opener for the Argos and their second loss without a victory.

Despite the Argos poor execution, they still had a chance to win the game with less than three minutes remaining. A bad snap by Montreal centre Frank Pomarico to punter Wally Buono gave Toronto the ball on the Als 16-yard line.

The Argos, however, didn't do a thing with the break. Quarterback Matthew Reed missed Peter Muller, who was alone near the goal line, with a pass on first down. After a five-yard gain on a running play, Reed was caught for a loss to end the threat.

"We had a guy open on the one-yard line and just didn't hit him," Argos coach Leo Cahill said. "It was our game if we had just taken it. Despite our injuries we had enough to win."

Enterprise Sails Away From Summer Doldrums

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Enterprise, the West Coast's entry in the America's Cup yacht races, slipped out of her summer doldrums Wednesday, whipping Courageous twice, once by the widest margin of the 1977 trials.

The newest of the United States 12-metre yachts took the start in the first race, but Courageous, 1974 Cup defender, caught up and had a lead of 26 seconds rounding the first windward mark on the 18-mile course.

However, Enterprise started showing her light air ability on the second beat to windward, rounding the third mark two minutes 34 seconds ahead of Atlanta Braves' owner Ted Turner in Courageous. At the finish of the first race, it was Enterprise by 2:46.

Enterprise, with San Diego sailmaker Lowell North at the helm, got a two-second jump on Courageous in the second observation trial race and gradually built her lead, finishing first by 1:24.

The New York Yacht Club's race committee set up the first race with 4.5-mile windward-to-leeward legs. The second race was 13.5 miles over a triangular America's Cup course.

Wednesday's two victories gave Enterprise a 3-1 lead over Courageous which took the first victory Saturday when Turner was disqualified for tacking too close.

Combined with her 4-6 record against Courageous and Independence in earlier preliminary trials, Enterprise's three victories this month against Courageous and one against Independence give her an 8-8 record overall.

Until Wednesday, the widest margin of victory was 2:41 in a race won by Enterprise against Independence, sister yacht to Courageous in the King's Point Syndicate.

Boy a Hero at Bisley

BISLEY, England (CP) — A 16-year-old schoolboy from Mississauga, Ont., Paul Mullin was the hero of the large Canadian gathering at Bisley, England, Wednesday.

Paul, with all the confidence of a natural-born marksman, turned out to be the top Canadian in the first stage of the Queen's Prize competition, the premier award of Commonwealth shooting.

On a day of mixed shooting conditions, when some of the best men in Canada, Britain, Australia and Zambia were going away disappointed, young Paul turned in a score of 102 out of a possible 105 with his seven shots at 300, 500 and 600 yards. He outshot everybody on the national team, the Canadian Forces team, and the Ontario contingent.

One of the Ontario men made the same score but, in comparing rifle scores, the better performance on the longest range is a decider. On this test, Paul came out one point better than Gordon Turney, of Carrying Place, Ont., who also had scored 102, but only 33 at 600 yards against the Mississauga boy's 34.

Paul was delighted with his result. It was not the top score in the stage—five British competitors had 104—but he had great satisfaction in being the highest Canadian.

Clive Cross of Victoria also qualifed for the second stage of the Queen's Prize with a score of 99.

Touch of Jitters Hurt Islanders' Performance

max low

Certainly field hockey men here were brave inviting the touring Dutch national team over to play the Vancouver Island Reps last week.

But they made two grave mistakes.

The Dutch team was so far out of the locals' class that it became embarrassing to watch, as indicated by the score of 8-0 and the fact that the Island players didn't even get in a single shot at the visiting team's goal.

And Island officials and players made it even worse by obviously telling themselves the Dutchmen were better than they really were!

"This is the fourth best team in the world," playing-coach Craig Wilson told me before the game. I think he must have stamped those words on the foreheads of each of his players.

Okay, they were good.

On paper, I suppose they could be considered "the fourth best team in the world." After all, the Dutch did place fourth in the Montreal Olympics behind New Zealand, Australia and Pakistan with highly-rated India finishing back in fifth.

However, only four members of the Dutch Olympic team were on the squad that played here — and, as a team, it wasn't all that marvellous. Hell, Canada held the same side to a tie in one of the tests and Western Canada actually BEAT the Dutch players 2-1 in Vancouver.

So they weren't unbeatable, and the Island side could easily have held them to a much closer score and given the fans a more exciting game in the process. As it was, most Island players were so nervous that, although they made many fine interceptions, they wasted opportunity after opportunity by miss-hitting the ball or firing their passes well wide of their teammates.

When you get down to comparisons, the Dutch team was good for a good reason. There are 100 or so men playing field hockey on Vancouver Island, yet the Dutch team manager Willem Cornelis told me there are 80,000 registered field hockey players in Holland. It's the nation's second most popular field sport — next to soccer.

Canadian field hockey players generally are lacking in international contact, the Dutch team coach Willem van Heumen said.

"Already this year we have played 27 international games and the Canadians only a handful," he explained.

Yet van Heumen said he thinks the game has inproved a lot in recent years here and he predicted Canada will make it into next year's prestigious World Cup conpetition to be held in March in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Canada must compete in the 12-team Inter-Continental Cup competition in Rome in September for four remaining berths in the World Cup and the Dutch coach is sure we'll make it for the first time ever.

The world's top 10 nations, including Holland and defending-champion India, have already qualified to compete in Buenos Aires.

Coach van Heumen glanced at the crowd of 300 or so in the stand at Royal Athletic Park and said such a game in Holland would draw anywhere from 5,000 to 8,000 fans. Still, when the Dutch team supporters in the crowd sang the Dutch national anthem and then joined in to sing the words of O Canada, it was very moving.

And, while the exhibition lacked in excitement, the evening did have its lighter moments.

Guest of honor, Alderman Bill Tindall, hit the first ball of the game but had to check first with Island Association president and local team manager Ranjit Sidhu on the correct way to clout the ball. When the alderman came to the big hit, it was more like a confident putt and there was a healthy chuckle and a cheer from the crowd.

Never mind, Bill, one or two of the Island players were so nervous they didn't hit the ball much better!

ENDING short retirement from Victoria Bate is pitcher Stan Kern. Big righthander announced his retirement two weeks ago but is expected to rejoin the Canadian senior men's fastball champions during a road trip through the United States that starts Friday.

NANAIMO ELIMINATED BY COMOX

LAKE COWICHAN — Gary Knight hit a bases-empty home run Wednesday night to help Comox Valley eliminate Nanaimo 3-2 in an eight-inning game at the Vancouver Island Senior Babe Ruth baseball championship tournament.

Comox meets unbeaten Victoria Firefighters at 6:15 tonight.

Knight's timely blast tied the game 2-2 in the seventh inning and Comox went on to victory by scoring on two singles and an error in the extra frame.

Les Burrows picked up the pitching win by hurling a two-hitter.

KELLY DAVIES GAINS SEMIS

BREMERTON, Wash. — Kelly Davies of Victoria advanced to the semi-finals of the Pacific Northwest junior tennis championships Wednesday by ousting Lisa Frodle of Seattle 6-0, 4-6, 6-4 in the 12-and-under division.

Six other Canadians also gained semi berths in various age brackets.

4 VICTORIANS WITH NATIONALS

Four players from Vancouver Island will be in the lineup of the Canadian national side when it takes on Scotland in an international women's field hockey exhibition match Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

Lesley Williams, Mairi Anne Longmore and Jan Crook of Victoria and Lynne Beecroft of Duncan are on the Canadian team.

Miss Crook is one of the leading scorers on the national team, which has compiled a 4-1-1 record against the Scottish side in the cross-country tour.

Game time is 2:30 p.m.

On Wednesday, Miss Beecroft and Michelle Williams scored for the British Columbia side as it posted a 2-1 decision over Scotland in Burnaby.

Game time is 6:30 p.m. at Hyacinth Park.

In final regular-schedule games Wednesday, CRESC Angels downed Vicettes 6-2 to finish in fourth spot and Hygrade Radio topped MacDonalds Furniture 10-3 to wind up in fifth position.

League playoffs open Tuesday but two squads — Angeles and Vicettes — will see action this weekend. The two teams meet in a best-of-three series to decide a berth in the British Columbia junior playoff with games scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Saturday as well as 11 a.m. and 1 p.m., if necessary, Sunday.

In Stuffy McGinnis Men's League play, Jim McHattie raced home on a fielders' choice in the top of the sixth inning to supply what turned out to be the winning run as Colony Inn Royals edged Juan de Fuca Builders 3-2 at Central Park.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Century Inn regained a share of first place with Castle Properties by defeating Hygrade Radio 8-3 in Heywood Men's League play.

And, in Sidney Men's League play at Sanscha Park, Don Norbury hit a home run to help Harvey's Sporting Goods to a 9-2 win over KOA Kampgrounds.

Mary Murphy of Naples, Fla., continues to lead the division after shooting a one-over-par 76 Wednesday for a 149 Total.

Pianist, Violinist Steal Spotlight in B.C. Festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

An exceptional performance by Canadian pianist William Aide and the spectacular virtuosity of American violinist Ruggiero Ricci marked the second concert in the B.C. International Festival series.

This one, third in the series scheduled for tonight at 8, and all subsequent mid-week concerts take place at the Shawnigan Summer School location on St. Michael's University campus.

American pianist Robin McCabe partnered Ricci in the Bach Sonata No. 3 in C Major and Beethoven's Op. 21, No. 1 in D Major The Bach proved a technically superior rendering in every way but was interpretively restless with Ricci's performance suggesting Paganini more than pure Bach.

The Beethoven was powerful and romantic and the teamwork superb, the partners matching each other perfectly and presenting an ideal balance, although, again from the purist's point of view, there was something of the exact Beethoven character missing.

However, in his performance of the Paganiniana an arrangement by violin virtuoso Nathan Milstein, Ricci triumphed totally, revealing his unparalelled mastery of Paganini's overwhelmingly difficult works. Fantastic bowing and fingering, dazzling spiccato and pizzicato marked this electrifying presentation.

In his rendering of the Sonata in B minor, he produced a perfectly balanced dynamic range and a technical brilliance.

At tonight's concert, McCabe is to perform for the first time in the west a piano version of Stravinsky's Firebird Suite, a piece that has roused considerable critical enthusiasm in other centres. Also participating tonight will be Canadian mezzo soprano Phyllis Mailing.

Lousy Coffee Very Costly

NEW YORK (AP) — A coffee vendor whose product so displeased a county judge that he was hauled into court in handcuffs and given a tongue-lashing has been awarded $141,000 for violation of his civil rights.

Judge William Perry of Suffolk County lost his $40,990-a-year job over a cup of coffee.

A Brooklyn federal court jury awarded 37-year-old Thomas Zarcone $80,000 in compensatory damages, to be paid by Perry and Deputy Sheriff James Windsor, who handcuffed Zarcone; $60,000 in punitive damages, to be paid by Perry; and $1,000 in punitive damages from Windsor.

A spokesman for the Royal Globe Insurance Co., which insures judges for compensatory damages, confirmed Wednesday that Zarcone rejected an out-of-court settlement of $205,000 offered by Royal Globe and Perry. He had sued for $5 million.

"I am very relieved," said Zarcone.

Zarcone said he had no regrets about not taking the out-of-court offer, explaining that he would have had to drop a claim now pending in state court in Riverhead.

Testimony showed Judge Perry had sent Sheriff Windsor to buy coffee from Zarcone's truck outside the courthouse on the evening of April 30, 1975. Ten minutes later, Zarcone testified, he was handcuffed and told "to come to the judge's chambers to see about the coffee, because it was terrible."

Perry testified: "I was irritated by the quality of the coffee and I felt it was an injustice on all of the people who had to go to court that evening and buy the product."

Zarcone said Perry yelled at him and said his coffee was watered down. He said the incident, which occurred in traffic court in Hauppauge, N.P., caused him to have nightmares in which he saw Perry hurling daggers at him. He said courthouse workers stopped buying food and beverages at his truck, forcing him out of business.

EXPENSIVE KISS

More than 5,000 teen-agers may pack Memorial Arena Monday night for the performance of the rock world's latest living legend, Kiss.

And maybe not. On Wednesday the show still wasn't a sellout, which could have something to do with the tab of $9.50.

But if 5,000 are on hand it will still rate as a small audience for a group which is one of the top drawing acts in the world, commanding wall-to-wall screaming fans in the largest coliseums and stadiums.

A relentlessly driving brand of rock, bizarre clown make-up, wildly elaborate costumes and garish stage effects has turned the group into a colossal commercial success in less than four years.

With 11 trailer-loads of equipment including a special stage and spectacle-making machinery, Kiss has been on a 15-city tour of Canada that began in Halifax and will end here Monday.

Courage Wins Medal

LONDON — A former British ballet dancer, paralysed from neck to toe at the height of her career, today received a medal from the Queen for her courage in painting with a brush between her teeth.

Elizabeth Twistington-Higgins, 53, is confined to a wheelchair and spends every night in an iron lung. Yet during the three hours a day when she can work before getting tired she has written her autobiography, formed her own troupe of dancers and paints other ballet dancers in action.

The Queen made her a member of the Order of the British Empire for her courage and determination.

Miss Twistington-Higgins appeared in several London shows before being struck by polio when she was 29.

Momma Really Knows

NEW YORK — One son tells "white lies," the other "drinks a little too much beer" and a daughter is "not a very good mother."

That's Miss Lillian, President Carter's 78-year-old mother, talking about her sons, Jimmy and Billy and daughter, Ruth Stapleton.

In a copyright article in the August issue of Ladies Home Journal, Lillian Carter was interviewed by her other daughter, Gloria Carter Spann, who, Miss Lillian said, pays "no attention to me and that suits me fine."

The president's 78-year-old mother said she most admires Jimmy's integrity, but "I don't think when Jimmy says 'I've never told a lie' that he means white lies, because everybody has to tell those."

About her beer-guzzling son, Billy, she said, "If he ever tried to change, he'd be the biggest mess that ever was."

She said that what she admires most about her daughter Ruth was that she "never gives up."

But, Mrs. Carter said "that's about all I admire about Ruth. She's not a very good mother, but her family just adores her, so I reckon she's all right."

Anita Keeps Her Job In Juice Commercials

LAKELAND, Fla. — Singer Anita Bryant will be retained as spokesperson for Florida orange juice, despite the controversy surrounding her fight against homosexual rights laws. The Florida Citrus Commission decided to retain Miss Bryant after hearing a research report saying 89 per cent of those interviewed were not negatively affected by her commercials. "I believe the report adequately answers the question of Anita Bryant's continued value as a spokesperson for our products," said Citrus executive director Ed Taylor. "The staff sees no need to change from our established marketing program at this time."

MONTREAL — A multi-millionaire who was sentenced to one day in jail and fined $85,000 for possession of $93,000 worth of stolen trucks had his sentence extended by three months by the Quebec Court of Appeal Wednesday. Individuals lucky enough to be rich "must not count on a substantial fine to escape a more exemplary and reforming imprisonment," wrote Mr. Justice Albert Mayrand in his notes on the judgment against Jean Guy Mathers. Mathers, 49, pleaded guilty in St. Jerome in May to possession of three trucks stolen from American Iron and Metal Co. on October, 1974. In imposing the one-day sentence, the sessions court judge said he was giving consideration to the fact that Mathers, father of nine children and owner of a quarry, cement-mix firm, realty company, farm and two drive-in movie theatres, was a philanthropist and an employer of 300 persons.

CHICAGO — The estranged wife of state Representative James Taylor has filed for divorce, charging among other things that her husband kept pulling her wig from her head. Ella Taylor, 39, also said Tuesday that Taylor, 47, "nags and harasses" her by complaining about her cooking and housekeeping. But Taylor, a Democratic ward committeeman and deputy superintendent of streets and sanitation as well as a legislator, had a different story. "Wigs," he exploded. "She must have 50 of them. She wears a different one every day." Taylor also said his wife offered him meals from fast-food outlets.

THIS HOLD-UP MAN GAVE THE CASH AWAY

EDMONTON (CP) — A man who held up a city store at gun point later gave the money to people he thought needed it at a bus stop, the Alberta Supreme Court was told.

Clayton Bugler, 19, of Edmonton, was sentenced to one day in jail and two years probation for armed robbery by a judge who said it was an unusual case.

Bugler entered a city store carrying a rifle and took $70 from the clerk and then gave the money to "people who looked like they needed it at the bus stop," court was told.

But Bugler walked into a police station and confessed the next day and later worked at two jobs to pay the store back.

Seven witnesses testified to their trust and confidence in Bugler, and a psychiatrist said Bugler had been under stress at the time of the robbery.

"One could hardly ask for a better background or recommendation than I have heard," Mr. Justice Tevie Miller said and added that had the law allowed it he would have considered a discharge.

THIEF CAUGHT SELF

VANCOUVER (CP) — A skid road resident arrested last April with a stolen television set also helped mark the set with an electric pencil as a guard against theft, Constable Gary Greer told provincial court Wednesday.

Frank Slade was arrested with the set in an alley and charged with breaking and entering and possession of stolen property.

Prosecutor William Smart said Slade broke into the offices of the Downtown Eastside Residents' Association, where he worked for a month as a janitor, and helped by two friends, took the television set, a stereo, a clock radio and an electric typewriter.

Slade said he bought the television from a skid road rooming house for $50 after a day of heavy drinking in nearby beer parlors with his two companions.

He said he did not examine the set closely before he purchased it and did not notice the markings identifying it as belonging to the association. The markings were put on to help police foil thefts.

Fish Shoreworkers Back New One-Year Contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union shoreworkers have approved a one-year contract with the Fisheries Association of B.C., which represents fish-packing companies, by a vote of 75 per cent.

The 4,000 shoreworkers will receive a six-per cent wage increase on the base rate of $6.34 an hour. Jack Nichol, union president, said Wednesday that this will mean hourly increases of between 35 and 53 cents.

Cherry Agreement

PENTICTON (CP) — Cherry growers from the area around the south end of Okanagan Lake Tuesday approved measures designed to halt the spread of little cherry disease.

The growers also decided to ask the British Columbia Fruit Growers' Association to set a levy on cherry producers' income to provide funds for compensation for growers who remove trees.

Whalers Heard

VANCOUVER (CP) — The whaling protest boat Greenpeace XI picked up Russian radio signals for the second day in a row Wednesday, raising hopes for an early encounter with Soviet whalers.

Crew members aboard the boat, the 150-foot converted minesweeper James Bay, estimated that the Soviet whalers are 400 to 500 miles away, off the coast of California.

Dispute Ends

KAMPLOOPS (CP) — A brief 22-hour dispute at the Weyerhaeuser Wood Products Ltd. mill here ended Tuesday afternoon with both sides appearing happy with the settlement.

Operations at the plant were shut down at 7 p.m. Monday in a dispute centred around the company's method of job posting.

Bail Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bail totalling $25,000 was set in provincial court Wednesday for two of three persons charged with conspiring to commit theft.

Bert Dalen, 57, of no fixed address, had bail set at $20,000 and Gail Joanne Strachan, 21, of Hamilton, Ont., $5,000. Ancellot Cote, 42, of Toronto, was denied bail.

Police said the conspiracy charges were laid after a plan to rob a Vancouver wholesale jeweller was thwarted.

Mother Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Yukon foster mother was charged Wednesday with second-degree murder after a three-year-old girl died in Vancouver General Hospital of head injuries.

Joy An Ladue, 3, died Tuesday and RCMP charged her foster mother, Frances Isaac, 29, of Whitehorse.

Railwest Conversion Discussed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Wednesday he is still optimistic about the future of B.C. Railway's car manufacturing plant in Squamish, folowing a meeting with federal officials.

Phillips met with representatives of the department of regional economic expansion and the ministry of industry, trade and commerce to discuss Ottawa's offer to provide technical experts to study the prospect of converting the plant to a more economic use.

Phillips said he expects to make an announcement today concerning the results of Wednesday's talks which were billed as an attempt to come up with a long-term solution to the problems facing Railwest.

The meeting between BCR directors and federal officials was first proposed in a telegram sent last Thursday to Phillips, a BCR director, by Senator Ray Perrault.

Phillips said other possible uses suggested by the federal government included a steel fabricating plant manufacturing steel towers, bridges and similar products.

The federal proposal is the latest attempt to save the Railwest plant, which is expected to close in August, putting 260 employees out of work.

English Teachers Lack Skills, Trained to Be 'Minor Critics'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A West Vancouver teacher says a lack of basic writing skills among English teachers is one cause of student illiteracy.

In a report to the West Vancouver School Board, Donald Dashwood-Jones says the blame for this lack of skills lies in the training that teachers receive for teaching English.

And, while they find reports of student illiteracy grossly sensationalized, two British professors leading a course at the University of B.C. in Vancouver also find fault with methods of teaching English.

Dashwood-Jones says that reading and writing skills are ignored in favor of literature and that present teacher training is more suited to producing "minor literary critics."

"Nobody in the past has demanded that English teachers be writers," says Dashwood-Jones. "It seems highly unlikely that any superintendent would recommend, or any board approve, the hiring of a teacher of automotive mechanics who was not demonstrably an automotive mechanic as well as being a teacher."

In his report, Dashwood-Jones recommends that:

—Advertisements for English teachers should specifically request those who wish to teach composition and have prepared themselves with practical courses;

—A group of composition teachers should be present in each secondary school;

—West Vancouver School Board hire a part-time co-ordinator — one who is both a teacher and a writer — to provide more emphasis on basic writing.

—School trustees in the province ask teacher-training institutes to give more balanced instruction of English teaching skills.

Two British professors leading a course for teachers this summer at UBC also find fault with methods of teaching English.

But Paddy Creber and Geoff Fox think unsubstantiated reports of increasing student illiteracy are being used as grounds for a return to simple but ineffective teaching methods.

"People are going back to remedies that didn't work in 1870 or in 1925," said Creber. "There's still no evidence drills and instruction in grammar improve language skills."

He said much teaching today causes students to become concerned with the irrelevant.

"Students ask anxiety questions: Can it be in green ink? How long should it be? When is it due?"

Creber and Fox said literacy can best be achieved if students are given the opportunity to become fluent and confident in the spoken language before they are taught to write.

Language should also be presented with a contextual framework, they said. Rather than being told in advance the correct way to say or write something, a student should be put in a situation where he has to talk in a particular way to fulfil an assigned task.

Creber and Fox head the English education department at the University of Exeter.

Kennedy Remains Despite Order

VANCOUVER (CP) — Suspected terrorist Jim Kennedy probably will remain in Canada for some weeks in spite of a July 14 deportation order.

Canada's immigration appeal board Wednesday granted Kennedy leave to appeal to the board for refugee status — and until that appeal has been heard, the deportation order is stayed.

Meanwhile, Federal Immigration Minister Bud Cullen has been named in a Federal Court of Canada civil action brought by Kennedy claiming the Canadian Bill of Rights has been infringed by the "cruel and unusual" treatment he has received in detention since May 27.

Also named are police Chief Don Winterton of Vancouver, Henry Bjarnason, director of the Lower Mainland Correctional Centre (Oakalla), immigration inquiry officer Jack Betteridge, and Walter Jennings, immigration manager for Vancouver.

A spokesman for Kennedy's lawyer, John Taylor, said the suit is a claim for justice and not for financial compensation.

During immigration inquiry hearings, Kennedy made numerous pleas for bail and at one point even offered to pay the bill for the hotel and for any guards the inquiry wanted. He also offered to put up a $100,000 surety.

All bids failed. Betteridge said he would not consider any amount of surety for bail.

City Sues CHAN-TV

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city of Prince George Wednesday launched a B.C. Supreme Court suit against B.C. Television System Ltd. for alleged libel.

The city seeks general and punitive damages for what it claims was libel on the firm's station CHAN-TV and the CTV network on April 20, 22, 25, 27, 29 and May 2, 4 and 5.

The city, in a statement of claim, alleges libel in news hour program references to construction of sewer facilities in the Blackburn district of Prince George.

GOV'T FIGHTING TO KEEP MINES

VANCOUVER (CP) — A B.C. Supreme Court judgment that returned two jade mines which had been forfeited by the previous New Democratic Party government to Kenneth Sidney Morris is being appealed by the present Social Credit government.

Morris, who said he was in the process of selling the mines for $23 million when they were forfeited, said the government had filed its appeal before he had learned that Mr. Justice Richard Anderson had not only ruled in his favor but said he was entitled to damages.

Morris fears the appeal could take a year of two which will delay his claim to damages which, he says, should be substantial.

"I only got my claims back when I went to Victoria on Monday and served the chief order," he said Wednesday. "But the titles are encumbered with notices that the judgment is being appealed which makes them quite useless.

"Certainly no one would buy them or lend any money on them."

The mines, located on the top of Antimony Mountain, 25 miles southwest of Lytton, were taken over by the NDP government after it amended legislation requiring miners to pay a $10 rental fee on claims.

Morris, who was out of the country at the time and was not notified of the change, failed to pay the fee on time.

'McCarthy-Type Smear' on CMHC

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro accused Progressive Conservative MP Walter Baker Wednesday of launching "a McCarthy-like smear campaign" by trying to implicate him in a controversy surrounding the financing of a low-rent project in Hamilton.

In an emotional Commons speech, Munro demanded that Baker, Conservative House leader and member for Grenville-Carleton, make a specific charge.

"If he doesn't have the guts . . . at least make a retraction and stop this obnoxious behavior," said Munro.

The minister's outburst followed three days of heated discussion in the Commons concerning $7.2 million loaned by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) to the developer of York Place project in Hamilton.

There have been allegations that all the money involved was not used to construct the project and that political influence was used to secure the loan.

Munro, who represents the riding of Hamilton East, has initiated a libel suit against a Hamilton newspaper in connection with the issue.

Baker said the newspaper basically stands by its story and only "compassion for the minister" prevented him from reading the story aloud in the Commons.

Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, responsible for CMHC, challenged Baker to accuse Munro outside the House so legal action could be taken against the Conservative MP.

Parliamentary rules allow MPs to accuse one another of wrong-doing inside the Commons without fear of a libel suit. However, outside the House, MPs lose this immunity. Baker refused to accuse Munro of any misdeed when questioned by reporters outside the Commons chamber.

Earlier Wednesday, Dean Whiteway (PC—Selkirk) asked if a federal minister had ordered the RCMP to raid CMHC offices Friday in Hamilton to secure documents related to York Place.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he was unaware of the raid.

York Place is in receivership and the project developer, Domenic Morganti, has been convicted of bribery charges.

Meanwhile, opposition MPs renewed requests for an inquiry into the affair and for Ouellet to make a formal statement to the House on the controversy.

Ouellet refused Wednesday to state if the government knows whether any of the money loaned by CMHC was diverted from the project.

The minister said his department and CMHC will examine the project closely before deciding on whether to spend additional money needed to complete York Place.

Cut Taxes or Up Spending —Que. Booming: Parizeau

BREAD, BUTTER ISSUE

OTTAWA (CP) — Regional Expansion Minister Marcel Lessard says he believes the investment climate will improve in Quebec as the Parti Quebecois government sees the political need to put "bread and butter on the table of the people."

Lessard said in an interview Thursday that both Ottawa and the separatist Quebec government are under pressure to improve the Quebec economy because of the national unity issue.

Quebec government statements have created uncertainty and forced some firms to wait before investing, he said. Some investors were putting money into developments now after waiting eight months to see what would happen.

But the minister said he thinks political realism will force Quebec to concentrate more on the economic issues than on "intellectual exercises."

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau says his government has reduced the province's indebtedness to the point where it now must decide whether to increase spending or lower taxes.

In a recent interview with The Canadian Press, Parizeau said he is anxious to see how Premier Rene Levesque and his cabinet will react to the choice when it prepares its second budget.

The Parti Quebecois's first budget, presented in April, was greeted with criticism because it increased taxes in several areas and abolished tax exemptions on children's clothing.

Parizeau said the tough budget was needed because Quebec had been falling deeper into debt for the last 15 years.

He said his budget lowered Quebec's outstanding debts to $900 million from $1.4 billion and gave the government room to manoeuvre financially.

In his budget speech Parizeau charged that all the "manoeuvering margin is concentrated at the federal level" and that this margin allows Ottawa to reduce its taxes and embark on new programs, while provinces and municipalities must add to the tax burden.

In underlining the successes of the PQ budget, Parizeau said he was not about to return to the "fireworks" of 1976 when Quebec heavily increased its borrowing from a large number of financial institutions.

He said the province must continue reducing its borrowing, but admitted feeling hesitant about telling the cabinet to put aside important legislation because of financial pressures.

Parizeau outlined Quebec's history of deficit financing, indicating that the problems began when the Liberal administration of former premier Jean Lesage displaced the UN from power in 1960.

"When Lesage came to power the Quebec debt was very, very low because of (Maurice) Duplessis (who headed the UN until his death in 1959). Duplessis paid his bills and didn't borrow."

Summer Vacation Delay For MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — The members of the Commons, whose speeches already have filled 7,817 pages of Hansard since this parliamentary session began last October, probably won't be going home to start their summer vacation this week as planned.

In fact, the business still left unfinished, as outlined by Government House Leader Allan MacEachen, could delay the summer break by as late as mid-August.

MacEachen told the Commons the government wants final approval of a bill updating the Immigration Act as well as bills placing Air Canada under more direct government control, putting Canada's grain trade on the metric system and reinstating the Northern Ontario riding of Thunder Bay.

The immigration bill, under heavy opposition attack in the Commons, could easily consume a week or more unless the government acts to limit debate.

Mini-Parties Removed As Deductible Expense

OTTAWA (CP) — Donations to political parties with less than 50 candidates will no longer be tax-deductible according to amendments introduced Wednesday to the Canada Elections Act.

The proposed change, tabled in the Commons by Government House Leader Allan MacEachen, is part of a package of dozens of mainly minor amendments to plug holes in the act.

Jean-Marc Hamel, chief electoral officer, summed up most of the amendments in an interview as ways "to better protect the taxpayers' money."

The amendments will not be debated in the Commons this session but likely will be introduced next fall so they will be in effect for the next federal election, Hamel said.

Prime Minister Trudeau has said the next election likely will be the spring of 1978 although he is not required to call one until 1979.

Currently, any group of persons can hastily form a political party and enjoy various privileges, such as the issuing of tax receipts, during an election campaign.

The amendments also would force candidates with a surplus of donated funds following an election to give the money to his or her party or to the receiver-general of Canada.

Several provisions are also included to facilitate voting for persons who are handicapped, working away from their home riding or unable to speak the language of the local returning officer.

Under existing legislation, a person who speaks only French or English cannot vote if the returning officer speaks only the other language and cannot find an interpreter. The proposed amendments would permit such a person to vote even if an interpreter could not be found.

However, restrictions still would apply to cases where the person spoke neither English nor French and an interpreter was not available.

The amendments also attempt to remove the confidentiality of certain election documents.

For instance, said Hamel, the nomination papers of former prime minister Lester Pearson are classified as confidential.

The proposed changes would allow interested persons to see such documents of historic value, he said.

The amendments would even change words associated with the English system of measurement to the metric system.

"No person shall arm himself, during any part of polling day, with any offensive weapon and, thus armed approach within one kilometre of a polling station, unless called upon to do so by lawful authority."

$100 Coins For Queen

HULL, Que. (CP) — A series of $100 gold coins commemorating Queen Elizabeth's Silver Junilee was inaugurated Wednesday at a special ceremony at the Hull branch of the Royal Canadian Mint.

A news release from the mint said a maximum of 300,000 coins, each containing a half ounce of gold, will be produced. They will be on sale from September to December, 1977, and will cost $140 each.

The coins, designed by Toronto artist Raymond Lee, show an effigy of the Queen and the inscription "Silver Jubilee — Elizbeth II—25 an de regne." The reverse of the coin bears a collage of official flowers of the provinces and territories.

Figures Still Dip For Immigrants

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of immigrants coming to Canada has steadily declined in recent years, with 149,429 admitted in 1976, and will likely continue to do so if new legislation is passed linking the number of immigrants to national economic conditions.

The immigration department's report for 1976, released Tuesday, noted the trend to lower immigration is continuing this year, with immigration for the first four months of 1977 down 15.3 per cent from the first four months in 1976.

The 1976 total of 149,429 immigrants was down 20.5 per cent from the 1975 total and was 14.4 per cent below the average of immigration to Canada over the previous 10 years.

The drop could be attributed to tighter entry requirements applied by the immigration department in the last couple of years, said the department report.

Of all the workers who came to Canada in 1976, 32.6 per cent were classified in the professional or managerial categories, 27 per cent were in the manufacturing or construction trades, 19.5 per cent were in clerical, commercial or financial occupations, 9.4 per cent were in service occupations and 1.9 per cent were in agriculture.

Immigrants from Britain numbered 21,548, or 14.4 per cent of the total. There were 17,315, or 11.6 per cent, from the United States; from Hong Kong there were 10,725, or 7.2 per cent; from Jamaica 7,282, or 4.9 per cent; from Lebanon 7,161 or 4.8 per cent; from India 6,733 or 4.5 per cent and from the Philippines 5,939.

AD CHARGE FOR COURTS?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city lawyer says he wants either a court test case or an inquiry under the federal Combines Act in a dispute with the Law Society of B.C. over advertising.

Vic Stephens, 46, who operates a storefront, self-help law firm, has been cited for unprofessional conduct, specifically advertising, by benchers of the law society. The society has the power to disbar lawyers or to suspend their practice.

The citation has the same effect as a charge, but will be heard in camera.

The Law Society said the citation is the result of appearances by Stephens on radio shows, television programs and as the subject of newspaper interviews, and is not the result of Stephens' law practice.

Stephens said that at no time did he go to any member of the media, and that individual members of the media saw a story, and that he answered their questions.

"I am not going to be muzzled by the Law Society; this is an extremely serious issue," said Stephens, who has been a lawyer for 21 years.

"The whole basis of the law society's objection is economic," he said. "An office with one lawyer and two paralegals can put 10 lawyers out of business."

"We have projected that in the first four months we have saved our clients $20,000 in legal fees."

He said that estimate is based on the "saving over fees I would normally charge, which are about average."

He said he would fight the Law Society on the issue of advertising and would probably contest its authority in court.

Vander Zalm To Skip VRB Rally

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said W

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Wednesday he has no intention of attending a Sunday rally in Vancouver in support of the Vancouver Resources Board.

Organizers issued an invitation to cabinet members to attend the meeting, at which various speakers are expected to oppose the planned abolition of the VRB by the provincial government.

"Frankly, I expect the rally will tend to attract one type, in any case, and really I don't suppose there is much opportunity for reasoning with them," said Vander Zalm, whose ministry will take over control of the board's functions.

"I guess we'll see an awful lot of the more regular protesters, the banner-carrier and the horn-blowers, and it will be really difficult to reason in a situation like that."

3 MLAs Must Be Banned—Gibson

Opposition members of the legislature criticized the Social Credit government Wednesday for failing to begin debate on a motion which would set up a special committee to investigate alleged improper payment of expense money to three government MLAs.

Alex MacDonald (NDP—Vancouver East) accused the government of playing politics on an important matter.

The opposition has charged that Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt and George Kerster (SC—Coquitlam) improperly received expense money while serving on a committee last year which investigated the housing problem in B.C.

Under the Constitution Act the three have disqualified themselves, and should not be allowed to sit in the legislature, the opposition contends.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom attempted Friday to introduce a motion setting up a special committee to look into the matter, but the opposition said they wanted to study the motion during the weekend before having it introduced.

Gardom said Tuesday the motion will be introduced "very soon," but did not specify when.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said Wednesday that since it is evident that the government is playing politics by not bringing the motion forward, the three should not be allowed to sit in the house pending the outcome of the investigation.

He said the rules of the house state that if a member's qualifications are brought into question, the member has the right to make a statement of explanation, and then should withdraw.

Speaker Ed Smith said he will study the matter, but indicated he did not agree with Gibson's point.

An NDP cabinet minister would have been taken to court for clarification of his status if he received government funds in contravention of the Constitution Act, Opposition leader Dave Barrett said Wednesday.

Barrett said in an interview he would have taken former minister-without-portfolio Alf Nunweiler to court if he knew Nunweiler received $4,500, at a rate of $250 a month, during the 18 months he was a director of B.C. Rail.

Nunweiler, defeated in the general election of 1975, returned the money to B.C. Rail in May, 1976,, when the matter was brought before the legislature.

"The first I knew about it was during the byelection in Vancouver East," Barrett said. "I know that Nunweiler paid the money back immediately he was informed, but of course we were no longer in office by that time.

Workers Have Right To Dump Union—LRB

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Labor Relations Board has ruled that workers have the right to dump their union if they believe the union is not serving them adequately.

The board said Wednesday that the 13 Nanaimo employees at Imperial Oil Ltd.'s Brechin Point bulk fuel distributing and warehouse centre it was cancelling the certification of Teamsters Local 213.

Last February the workers applied for certification and in a later vote 11 rejected the union.

The union, in turn, appealed the decision by the LRB. But, in the decision prepared by LRB vice-chairman Jack Moore, Ben van der Woerd and Arnold Smith the workers' right to get rid of the union was upheld.

The workers maintained the union provided inadequate servicing and there was an over-estimation by employees of the benefits to be gained through union representation.

They believed that better management-employee relations could be established if they were again to deal directly with the employer through a joint industrial council which existed prior to the union's being certified in 1969.

They further believed the union was no longer serving a useful purpose.

The union contended its representation of the workers had been adequate and argued that the question of adequacy of representation was not one for the board to investigate.

The union maintained the primary question was whether the union has ceased to represent the employees in a particular bargaining unit. The Teamsters said in this regard it still represented a majority of workers at Brechin Point.

The panel noted it is careful to exercise its discretion on decertifications but noted: "A union does not have a property right in its certification which ensures perpetuation of the certification even after the employees it seeks to represent no longer desire that representation.

"The board cannot accept the union's arguments in this case.

"While we are satisfied that the union has not been negligent in its representation of the employees at Brechin Point, we are unable to conclude that, therefore, the employees must continue to be represented against their clear wishes."

The panel also noted that there was no evidence of employer influence, "nor have any of the applicant employees been shown to be in breach of their collective agreement."

Deer Season Proposed

CROFTON — A two-year season on young deer and doe has been proposed on Maple Mountain by the B.C. fish and wildlife branch to avert an overpopulation problem.

The two-year antlerless season would be held between Nov. 5 and 20, provincial conservation officer Andy Ackerman said, and would allow hunters using shotguns to disregard a North Cowichan bylaw prohibiting the discharge of firearms on the mountain.

Rifles would not be permitted, Ackerman added, because they are considered dangerous at a range up to three miles compared with 100 yards for shotguns.

Objections from residents near Maple Mountain are based on safety.

North Cowichan Ald. Ron McKinnon, however, said the municipality has studied various ways of eliminating the deer problem.

"The people asked us to try to resolve this problem," he said, "and it's obvious the costs of trapping the deer and taking them to another area are prohibitive."

Patrol Hired To Control Revellers

Young revelers who have been damaging beachfront property have prompted homeowners in the Mount Douglas Park area to hire a private security firm to patrol the beaches.

Dr. V. P. L. Connolly said he and other residents of Eva and Durling decided to hire the guards to patrol the area since. Saanich police can usually only respond to complaints.

Cost for the service is $200 and will continue to September. Security patrols will call police in the event of a wild party.

Time Out on the Square

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

It's a lazy easy-going place these days, making room for all kinds of people and a platoon of pigeons.

But Centennial Square wasn't always that way and people being what they are, won't always be in future.

For the moment the young people prefer the grass to eat their sandwich or snooze, to flirt or soak in the sun. The older people favor the benches but feel enough at ease to shed their shoes.

You might suspect the square, not even a decade old, has finally come of age. But that would be ignoring both local history and the fundamental place of the square in the affairs of urban people — a place to come and watch, to show off and sometimes sound off.

Centennial Square was just an idea in the early 60s, finally emerging after endless council chatter as part of a $2 million refurbishing which included an antique city hall.

It cost more than expected, of course, with its planes of brick, grass and concrete. But in 1971 it was judged the best beautification project in British Columbia.

Then a traumatic development! People started to gather there, not people really but hippies, long-haired and somewhat smudged. They came in great numbers and just lay around.

One alderman said they should be whipped. Council considered a bylaw to keep them off the grass. The local merchants hated them very much. One mayor even suggested a wall to separate them from respectable commerce.

It's quiet in Centennial Square these days. But don't bet it will stay that way.

Quadra Steel To Stay Here

The company has reached an understanding, as predicted at Victoria Labor Council two weeks ago, with the Joint Shipyard Conference representing a dozen unions employed in Yarrows shipyard and its affiliate Quadra Steel.

"The resulting concessions by both sides permits Quadra Steel Ltd. to remain as a viable operation servicing the Victoria region," Harrison said.

Quadra had intended to close its metal service centre adjoining Yarrows on July 29, the last business day of the month. The company blamed a declining economy and consequent drop in demand for construction and fabricating steel products.

The firm has been a principal supplier of reinforcing bar used in concrete structures and steel plate for shipbuilding, tanks and pressure vessels.

Fifteen employees would have been displaced by the shutdown which would have centralized Quadra's Vancouver Island operations at its Nanaimo plant.

Harrison said union-company discussion was carried on in an "atmosphere of resolving a mutual problem."

Electrician's union business agent Jim McAvoy, president of the Joint Shipyard Conference, chaired the meeting at which final terms were agreed upon.

Harrison would not elaborate on the terms other than to say "they have provided us with some flexibility regarding our operations."

Legal steps remain to be taken, and the union spokesman may wish to specify the arrangements later, Harrison said.

"The results speak for themselves. We're happy to be able to continue the operation of Quadra Steel in Victoria," the company president said.

Hearing Soon On 'Park'

Saanich council is almost ready to put the controversial matter of an industrial park at Royal Oak to public hearing.

Council's lands, planning and housing committee voted Wednesday to recommend a public hearing be held at the earliest possible date, probably sometime after Aug. 29.

The municipal solicitor has been asked to prepare a bylaw.

Council is expected to set a date for the hearing at its next meeting.

The hearing will deal with only the first phase of development and involves about 88 acres in the 140-acre parcel of land under consideration.

HOTEL NOISE UNDER FIRE

'Near-Riotous' Conditions

Strathcona Hotel owner John Olson today promised city aldermen he would try to minimize the noise from the hotel's parking lot on Courtney.

His assurance came after John Richardson, manager of the nearby Chateau Victoria apartment-hotel, complained of the "nightmarish" problems caused by patrons leaving the Old Forge cabaret in the early hours of the morning.

Richardson said in a letter that his establishment had lost 20 tenants in the last three years as well as many prematurely departing hotel guests, and received many complaints, about the "near-riotous conditions that prevail."

"The drunken, vulgar screaming, breaking of bottles, the revving of car motors, screeching of car tires and urinating of both sexes can be seen and heard from the second to the 17th floor, and continues to as early as 4:30 a.m.," he said.

Richardson, who attended this morning's meeting of the council committee, also told aldermen that he had heard similar complaints from the management of the Executive House and The Empress.

Ald. Ron McKenzie said as council is trying to encourage more people to live downtown, his sympathies are with the complainants. But Ald. Murray Glazier said this situation is not as clear cut as complaints aired a few months ago about the James Bay Inn.

That situation involved the direct conflict of a cabaret operation with a residential area, he noted, whereas the Old Forge is downtown and if cabarets can't be permitted there, where were they to go?

Glazier also told Richardson that the Chateau Victoria had been built when cabaret and other uses were already well established, and said the building of the hotel had upset many people because it involved the demolition of a landmark building (the Parrot House) and clearing the land of trees.

Olson, who was attending the meeting to speak on another item of business, claimed that he was not aware any problem existed until Wednesday. He said he would consider installing "bumps" on the parking lot to slow down vehicles and also hiring a security guard to patrol the area in the period around 2 to 3 a.m.

"It is a problem but we will do everything we can," he added.

Unfair Labor Practice By Camosun, Says CUPE

An unfair labor practice complaint has been entered against Camosun College council for its repudiation of a contract negotiated with its staff union.

Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing about 75 inside and outside workers, instructed staff representative Tom Smith to complain to the B.C. Labor Relations Board that the college had not bargained in good faith.

Smith said he had made the formal complaint and that the next move would be up to the LRB.

He said he had never encountered the situation before in his considerable experience of negotiating with public employers.

Bargaining started toward the end of May following an initial meeting which the college principal, bursar and chairman of the negotiating committee attended. The bursar, P. Dean Winram, represented the committee from that point in about 10 or 12 bargaining sessions that produced a tentative agreement later accepted by the CUPE membership, Smith said.

Then the college said Winram had not been given the authority to negotiate a contract. Peter Yorke, negotiating committee chairman, said Winram had been taking part in preliminary discussions only.

He said the union had been told Winram was not given authority to represent the council and had been merely trying to avoid a situation which would have led to appointment of a mediation officer, as the union desired.

Smith said the union had started, as was the practice, with the contract that expired in March and made proposals based on this. When tentative agreement was reached, the proposals were put before the college council and as a result changes were made.

In revising the document, the college made alterations in sections relating to terminology, union security and benefits for early retirement, without any discussion with the union.

Gov't Gives Cash Lift To Gallery

A cheque for the first half of a provincial grant of $223,000 was presented Wednesday by Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf to Art Gallery of Greater Victoria president Donald Miller.

The grant was initiated several months ago before construction of the new wing had begun. Its source is the Community Recreational Facilities Fund.

The grant is to be used to finance expansion of storage, workshop and display facilities, including expansion of two existing galleries in addition to the new Asian gallery.

Besides serving the Greater Victoria area, the gallery reaches large numbers of Vancouver Island residents through its extension programs.

8% Pay Hike For Library

An historic relationship with city hall staff has been restored for Greater Victoria Public Library employees in a new two-year contract negotiated by Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 410.

An 8 per cent wage increase retroactive to Jan. 1 has tacit approval of the Anti-Inflation Board although it exceeds AIB guidelines by 2 per cent.

The board took into account a previously-enjoyed historic relationship in contracts negotiated by city hall and library staffs which was lost in the previous contract.

About 70 librarians, clerks, typists, bookbinders and others will receive a 4 per cent wage hike effective from Jan. 1, 4 per cent later and a minimum of 4 per cent in 1978 depending upon cost of living.

In another contract negotiated with Victoria and Saanich as owners of Royal Oak Cemetery, CUPE has secured a 6 per cent increase in wages for about a dozen cemetery employees in 1977 and a minimum 4 per cent next year, again depending on COL. This year's increase is retroactive to January.

Brunch Not New Nor American

craig claiborne

Although the word "brunch" has a distinctly North American ring to it, it is, like smog and chortle, according to H. L. Mencken, of British origin. "Brunch, designating a combination of breakfast and lunch, eaten about noon, appeared in England about 1900,"' Mencken wrote, "but it was 30 years later before it began to make any headway on this side of the water." The author added the following footnote: "On April 10, 1941, the Fifth Avenue Hotel in New York was advertising a 'Sunday strollers' brunch, $1 per person, served from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Patterns of dining in Western cluture are as mindlessly entrenched in our modes and style of living as the use of knives and forks (which reminds one of the Chinese gastronome who, when asked why the Chinese use chopsticks, replied casually: "We do not choose to butcher at table").

We take our three meals a day at more or less regular and established intervals, which is certainly monotonous in its reflexive sort of way. It also explains why meals when taken out of that humdrum and predictable routine seem stimulating and appetite whetting: Dinner taken at 11 in the evening in Spain; cress sandwiches, crumpets with marmalade and tea on a late afternoon in England; and, for backpackers and fishermen, fried trout cooked over an open fire at sun-up beside a mountain stream.

High on that list of breakaway routines are late breakfasts or brunches served at home or in the home of friends on weekends, preferably Sunday at midday or thereafter.

MOCK EGGS BENEDICT

2 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup milk or use half milk and half cream
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
Tabasco sauce to taste
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ pound grated cheese such as cheddar, Swiss or gruyere
Water to cover
¼ cup white vinegar
4 eggs
4 slices cooked ham
4 slices hot butted toast
Paprika.

1. Melt two tablespoons butter in a saucepan and add the flour, stirring with a wire whisk.

2. When blended, add the milk, stirring rapidly with the whisk. Season with salt, pepper, Tabasco sauce, Worcestershire and nutmeg. Remove from the heat and add the cheese, stirring until melted.

3. In a skillet bring enough water to the boil to cover the eggs when added. Add the vinegar and salt to taste. Carefully break the eggs into the water, one at a time, and cook gently until the white is set and the yolk remains runny. Carefully remove and drain on paper toweling.

4. Meanwhile, heat the ham in remaining tablespoon of butter, turning once.

5. Arrange the toast on four hot plates. Cover each slice with a slice of ham and add a poached egg to each serving. Bring the sauce to the boil and spoon it over. Sprinkle each serving gingerly with paprika and serve hot.

Yield: 4 servings.

SCOTCH WOODCOCK

4 slices buttered toast
16 egg yolks
1 cup heavy cream
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons cold butter
Tabasco sauce to taste
4 teaspoons anchovy paste
8 flat fillets of anchovy

1. Prepare the toast and keep it warm.

2. Bring water to the boil in a saucepan large enough to hold the saucepan in which the eggs will be cooked.

3. Combine the yolks and cream in a mixing bowl and beat lightly to blend. Add salt and pepper to taste.

4. Pour the mixture into a heavy saucepan and set the saucepan in the boiling water. Cook, stirring constantly, taking care to scrape around the bottom of the saucepan to make certain the egg mixture does not stick. Continue cooking until the egg mixture has the texture of soft scrambled eggs. Do not overcook. The moment the eggs are done, add the cold butter and stir. This should stop the cooking action. Add Tabasco sauce.

5. Smear one side of each piece of toast with a teaspoon of anchovy paste. Heap equal amounts of the hot egg mixture onto the toast and garnish each serving with two crossed anchovies.

Yield: 4 servings.

GRILLADES
(A braised meat dish from Louisiana)

1 pound veal scaloppine, about eight slices, or one slice of round steak without bone or fat
1 tablespoon garlic
Salt to taste
½ teaspoon or more ground black pepper
¼ teaspoon or more crushed red pepper flakes
Flour for dredging
2 tablespoons oil
1 cup finely chopped onions
1 cup tomatoes packed with tomato paste
1 cup water.

1. If scaloppine are used, pound them lightly with a flat mallet. If round steak is used, cut it into two-inch squares. Pound with a flat mallet to make them twice that size and half as thick. Place the pieces of meat on a flat surface.

2. Combine the garlic, sale and pepper and smear this on the meat on both sides. Sprinkle with the pepper flakes and pat them in. Dredge on all sides in flour.

3. Heat the oil in a large, heavy skillet and cook the meat over fairly high heat until golden brown on all sides, about five minutes. Scatter the onion over and around the meat. Cook briefly to wilt and add the tomatoes blended with the tomato paste. Add the water, salt and pepper. Cover closely and simmer 20 minutes.

This Owl Cake A Wise Choice

Ann M. wrote saying that she wanted to make an OWL CAKE for her Brownie Pack party.

These cut-out cakes I have been giving you for birthday parties have been ever so popular and I have made an "owl" cake for Ann and her pack.

OWL CAKE

POUND CAKE (base)

1 c. margarine (½ lb.)
1½ tsp. freshly grated nutmeg
½ tsp. salt
1⅝ c. sugar
5 eggs
2 c. stirred but not sifted cake-and-pastry flour

FROSTING:

½ c. margarine
2 c. icing sugar
2 tbsp. molasses
7 drops green food coloring
2 tsp. cocoa
4 tbsp. water
1 tsp. vanilla
2 large yellow mint patties
2 white lifesavers
2 brown smarties
1 tsp. cinnamon
1-tsp. granulated sugar

Make the Pound Cake by beating the margarine with the nutmeg, salt and sugar for five minutes, scraping down sides of bowl three or four times. Now add FOUR of the eggs, one at a time while beating, about 2 minutes, scraping down sides two or three times. Slowly add flour with beaters on "low" then add remaining egg. Turn into buttered wax paper-lined 13x9" pan and bake at 300 deg. Fahr. about 45 minutes. Cool in pan. Turn out and peel off wax paper.

Cut out six shapes: 1) HEAD — one 4½" diameter round; 2) BODY — one oval 7¼" long x 6" wide; 3) TWO WINGS — triangles cut from corners of cake 2¼x3½" with concave inner curved side; 4) one 5x¾" strip for top of head with clipped ends to represent ears; 5) one 2½x1" bar with ½" deep triangles cut out to represent feet.

To assemble line a 15x12" tray with paper doilies or a paper table mat. On it place the "body" about 4" from bottom narrow end. Scoop out a small crescent at top. Into this fit the "head". Into crevices between head and body (neck) fit point of wing to look like square shoulders but spread wings out a bit as if the bird is starting to take flight. Cut a little slice from top of head and put 5" strip in place clipped at ends to simulate ears. Place 2½" foot bar at bottom.

To make Frosting combine first SEVEN ingredients. Completely cover cake on ALL sides and top. To make huge eyes, place yellow wafers prominently at top of head centred with lifesaver topped with brown smartie for "pupil". With tip of paring knife draw it lengthwise several times as a sculptor would to suggest feathers. Mix cinnamon and sugar and very sparingly sprinkle all over.

Cut all remaining pieces of leftover cake into small shapes and frost all over and serve as petite fours.

My grandchildren had a delightful time with this — some wanted wings or feet or eyes. It was a great success.

Recipes to Help Stay Cool as a Cucumber

Canadian-grown field cucumbers are making their first appearance of the season on the market now. This refreshing vegetable should continue in good supply until mid October say food consultants at the food advisory division of Agriculture Canada, Ottawa.

Most cucumbers sold at retail are Canada No. 1 grade. Select cucumbers that are well shaped, firm, fresh and bright green in color. Avoid those that are withered or shriveled as they are often tough and bitter. Overmature cucumbers usually have an overgrown puffy appearance.

Wash the cucumbers to remove dirt, wipe dry and refrigerate in a tightly closed plastic bag or container. Don't peel or slice them until ready to use. They will keep in the refrigerator for up to 10 days but should not be frozen.

The most popular way to serve cucumbers is raw — in fact few consumers know that cooked cucumber can be delicious. Some successful ways to serve them raw are in salads, appetizers, relishes and sauces.

COOL CUCUMBER SALAD

3½ cups sliced cucumber
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup plain yogurt
1 tablespoon oil
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon chopped fresh chives
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons finely chopped onions
Lettuce cups

Sprinkle cucumbers with salt and chill 30 minutes. Drain well. Combine remaining ingredients. Add cucumbers and mix well. Serve immediately. Serve in lettuce cups. 6 servings.

CUCUMBER EGG MOLD

1 4-ounce package cream cheese, cubed and softened
½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
2 tablespoons vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
1 3-ounce package lime jelly powder
1 cup boiling water
1 teaspoon chopped fresh chives
½ teaspoon finely grated lemon rind
1 tablespoon lemon juice
4 chopped hard-cooked eggs
1½ cups chopped, peeled cucumber

Beat together cheese, mayonnaise or salad dressing, vinegar and salt. Dissolve jelly powder in boiling water. Immediately add cheese mixture and stir until well-blended. Stir in chives, lemon rind and lemon juice. Chill until partially set then fold in eggs and cucumber. Turn into 5-cup mold and chill until firm. Unmold and serve. Garnish with cucumber slices if desired. 6 servings.

CUCUMBER BOATS

6 medium cucumbers, peeled
1 medium tomato, chopped
2 tablespoons grated onion
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1 teaspoon dill seed
½ cup dairy sour cream
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

If you always keep a supply of canned seafood on hand, you will never be at a loss what to serve your family or unexpected guests.

The "Seafarin' Medley" folder is a real idea sparker. It not only has suggestions for almost instant canapes, but also offers recipes for many other quick and easy appetizers and some elegant hot dishes like curried shrimp, oyster noodles and mandarin shrimp.

You will learn that even those eager to lose weight, can indulge in seafood. A 3 oz. serving of canned clams only yields 45 calories, 3 ozs. of canned oysters yield 76 calories, and 3 ozs. of canned shrimp 100 calories.

If you consider canned shrimp too salty, simply drain and rinse them under cold water. Then drain them again.

Make it a point not to discard the liquid from canned clams or oysters as they contain valuable nutrients.

It is also worth knowing that one serving of oysters provides more than your daily requirement of iron and copper, about all the iodine you need and one tenth of your daily requirement of protein, calcium, phosphorous, Vitamin A and B.

Injured Husbands?

DEAR ABBY: You told COULD BE there is no such thing as a "frigid-dear" — only clumsy men. This is true in too many cases. But, Abby, please note that this should be a conclusion reached only after other possibilities are ruled out.

Perhaps the man is not clumsy. Perhaps the woman had an early or recent trauma that handicaps her. Perhaps she has a personality problem, a neurosis or a psychosis that prevents her from responding to an ideal husband.

If the husband is ideal and you unload your statement on him, then you have injured him as surely as you would have with a knife. — SHRINK.

DEAR SHRINK: Generalizations are dangerous and unfair I admit, but my mail tells me that only men found fault with this generalization. Women wrote in great numbers to applaud my reply. For example:

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to COULD BE was short but truly soul-satisfying. "No 'frigid-dear' — only clumsy men."

I have preached that for years, and at 95 plus, which I am now, I am more certain that it is a fact than I was at 25.

We gals have been shortchanged from the beginning, and males haven't yet realized it — and probably never will. Your column made my day, and I've been reading you for a long, long time. — LILLIAN.

DEAR ABBY: Will your please tell me how come all the people who know how to run the country are busy driving taxicabs and cutting hair? — CURIOUS.

DEAR CURIOUS: Give thanks that all the people who CLAIM to know how to run the country are driving taxicabs and cutting hair — and NOT running the country.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in reference to SHOCKED, whose soon-to-be-married daughter informed her family that they should please telephone before coming over.

You said it "sounded unfriendly," but it wasn't necessarily so. Thanks for that answer. My husband and I had to tell our families flat out to please phone and to stop ringing our doorbell because they happened to be in the neighborhood.

Several times we were right in the middle of lovemaking when our families dropped in on us unexpectedly. Needless to say, it was embarrassing for all of us. We would much rather have been interrupted by the telephone (and we have been) than by the doorbell. — BEEN THERE.

DEAR BEEN: There's no reason to be interrupted by the telephone, either. Take the phone off the hook until it's convenient for you to answer. If someone calls and your line is busy, they'll call again.

Flora's Court Test on Pension Queried

elizabeth forbes

That Conservative MP Flora MacDonald received offers from housewives across the country to act on her behalf if she challenges the Canada Pension Plan in court comes as no surprise.

Miss MacDonald's contention in the House of ommons during debate on CPP amendments, that the Plan should go much further and give full economic recognition to housewives, was bound to bring response.

Since the Royal Commission on the Status of Women set forth clearly that "housewives should be entitled to pensions in their own right under the Canada Pension Plan or the Quebec Pension Plan," women in every walk of life, in groups and organizations and as individuals, have been asking for such an amendment to the CPP.

Eventually, that amendment will be accepted and become law. Mainly, I would suggest this is because of changing attitudes concerning the position of women in what has been labelled the fundamental unit of Canadian life — the family.

However, I'm not so sure Miss MacDonald's way of going after it is the right way.

Granted, it will bring her many new friends (and has done already) and, I would think, added votes when the next federal election rolls around.

Certainly it appears attractive on the surface, but I cannot help wondering if it might end up as doing a disservice to the very women it proposes to help.

After all, any such proposal for coverage of housewives must be examined (and I'm sure is being examined) in the context of the basic principles which now govern the CPP. And, as it has been pointed out from time to time, because it involves a departure from these principles, the long term effects on the plan must also be considered.

Bill C-49 to amend the Canadian Pension Plan has already passed the House of Commons, the Senate, and received Royal consent on July 14.

In it there are two amendments that, while not going as far as Flora MacDonald wants, do recognize the contribution of spouses who work in the home and provide them with increased financial security.

Briefly, those amendments have been described as "recognition of women's rights and the contribution they make to society and to the country as a whole through their work in the home and the raising of children."

The first would permit CPP credits earned by both spouses during the marriage to be divided equally between them on divorce or annulment of the marriage.

This was specifically recommended by the Royal Commission on the Status of Women and is aimed at ensuring for the "spouse at home" a fair share of an asset accumulated by the couple during their marriage.

Main conditions set forth in Bill C-49 under which such credits could be divided are that the marriage must be of at least three years' duration and the spouses must have cohabited for three consecutive years; that an application for division of pension credits must be made within three years of the effective date of the divorce or annulment and that the marriage is dissolved after the effective date of the amendment.

The second amendment is a provision to permit CPP contributors to "drop out" from the calculation of their CPP benefits any months of low or zero earnings spent at home caring for children under age seven which might otherwise adversely affect their CPP entitlement.

Purpose of this drop-out provision is to ensure that a parent who remains at home to care for young children will not be penalized for that period which he or she has low or zero earnings.

It can therefore be looked upon as giving some economic recognition of, and financial security for work done in the home.

In both the House of Commons and the Senate it has been recognized that the above amendments must have approval of two-thirds of the provinces having two-thirds of the population of 10 provinces, before they can be proclaimed as law.

The one for splitting CPP credits appears to have the necessary support. The child rearing drop-out idea has the support of all provinces except Ontario and because of its population, if it continues to withhold its approval, the implementation of that amendment would be effectively vetoed.

Another section in Bill C-49 that is of interest to women asks for retroactive payment of retirement benefits to contributors between the ages of 65 and 70.

Still others provide for benefit application to be made on behalf of deceased persons and equalization of children's benefits in respect of all children regardless of family size.

Every one of the above proposals have been endorsed by the Advisory Council on the Status of Women, the Canada Pension Plan Advisory Committee and, with the one exception I have mentioned, by all the provinces.

It is very evident from all this — and from changes made in the CPP in 1975 — that step by step women are gaining the recognition urged and recommended in the report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women.

There is still much to be gained, of course, and it will be gained, not necessarily by going to court at this point in time, but rather by continuing the step-by-step process until the final goal is reached — full recognition of the economic rights of women within the Canada Pension Plan.

Even Young Children Can Show High Blood Pressure Symptoms

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

I've had spells of lightheadedness. I've been examined and re-examined by competent doctors. Examination of my blood is negative; neurological examination is negative, and as the old joke goes, I'm getting "sick from negatives." Could the fact that I lead a hectic life at business and eat irregularly be responsible? — Mr. G. K.

Dear Mr. K.:

You have probably put your finger directly on the triggering mechanism for your discomfort. In the absence of any underlying cause for light-headedness, emotional tensions and stress could be considered predisposing factors.

Perhaps even more important is the fact that you eat irregularly. Many people have the proverbial orange juice and coffee for breakfast without any substantial protein to support them. When doctors examine patterns of eating they often find that long stretches of time go by without any solid food. For example, finishing dinner at 7 or 8 in the evening and then not eating until lunch time the next day, has a span of 16 to 18 hours. It is not unusual to find that the symptoms of light-headedness may disappear with adequate nutrition and by avoiding those long periods without food.

Protein, particularly, for breakfast and between meals, and avoidance of sudden rapid changes of position, may be of significant help.

My mother has a cancer. My wife is deathly afraid of visiting her because she thinks that cancer may be contagious. Perhaps if she should read in your column that this is not so it might make life more bearable for all of us. — Mr. S. O. V.

Dear Mrs. V:

From the scientific point of view, it is impossible for a cancer to be transmitted from one person to another, even though these people may be in intimate contact with each other.

Cancers are neither infectious nor contagious. Nevertheless, fears and confusion about cancers are rampant. Although cancers cannot be transmitted, fear and anxiety can readily be passed from one person to another. Often these fears are very destructive and can impair personal happiness.

Some people react rather violently when they are in contact with patients who are terminally ill. It would be unwise to push too strenuously for frequent visits by your wife. There are many gestures of kindness and consideration that she can make and yet spare herself some part of the distress she may feel, even after being reassured.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By DR. JEAN MAYER and DR. JOHANNA DWYER

Although most of us consider high blood pressure, or hypertension, to be a strictly adult problem, there is increasing emphasis being put on spotting it early, perhaps even in childhood. Indeed, a new report by the U.S. task force on blood pressure control in children of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute urges that "all physicians who care for children three years old and older should be encouraged to measure their patients' blood pressure once a year."

About 23 million North Americans are thought to have high blood pressure. Because the disease often has no symptoms, many victims are unaware that they have a potentially lethal disease, which is a leading cause of strokes and a major factor in heart and kidney diseases. This is why every adult should have his or her blood pressure checked regularly.

But why children? Although there is not an epidemic of hypertension among our young people as there is among adults, there are very good reasons that children also should have their blood pressure measured.

First, although hypertension is uncommon in children, it does occur nonetheless. And when we do find it in youngsters, especially in the very young, further investigation very often reveals a cause that can be reasily treated. (This is unlike the case of adult hypertension, in which there is no apparent cause in up to 90 per cent of the cases.)

In the children, the more common causes are cardiovascular disease, kidney problems, endocrine disorders or diseases of the central nervous system. Less common are certain types of tumors and diseases of the connective tissues. Lead poisoning can also cause a rise in blood pressure, as can certain drugs, such as amphetamines, corticosteroids, certain antibiotics and appetite depressants. Oral contraceptives can also bring on hypertension in certan females.

There are also a few children who, like adults, have primary hypertension. The cause may be genetic; for example, the disease is much more severe and common in blacks than in whites in the U.S. Children whose parents and siblings have high blood pressure are at greater risk as well. Moreover, a high intake of salt may be an influencing factor, and there is a positive correlation between hypertension and overweight.

Once primary hypertension has developed, it cannot — at least by currently available methods — be cured. But it can be kept in check by judicious and regular use of specific drugs, diet and exercise. We cannot identify precisely who will develop high blood pressure. There are, however, two predictors: a family history of the disease and a phenomenon which doctors are beginning to call "tracking."

The theory of tracking, which is now being tested in long-term studies, holds that throughout life, a person's blood pressure remains at about the same level in relation to that of the rest of the population of the same age and sex. For example, if a five-year-old's blood pressure is about in the middle range of other children his age, it will probably remain there throughout life unless it is influenced by some disease. This means that children whose blood pressures are on the high side should be identified early so that preventive measures can be taken before the disease has a chance to develop.

It's recommended that whenever pressure is measured, at least three different readings should be made on three different occasions because, in both adults and children, the pressure tends to fluctuate normally. If the pressure is consistently elevated, further investigation should be undertaken to try to find the cause.

If no cause is found, and the diastolic pressure (that's the lower of the two numbers in a reading such as 110-70) is greater than 90 for a child between the ages of three and 12, or above 100 for children 12 to 18, they should be referred to a specialist for treatment. The usual treatment consists of:

—Placement on a moderate salt-restricted diet (about 5 grams a day for teenagers and less for younger children).

—Stopping smoking or not beginning at all.

—Regular exercise, such as calisthenics, swimming, running, baseball, basketball and other active sports. (Static exercises like weightlifting and isometrics actually raise blood pressure and thus should be avoided by hypertensives.)

Examination for other risk factors, such as high blood levels of cholesterol, triglycerides and glucose.

If these approaches prove ineffective, drugs may be carefully added. Minimal doses should be tried at first.

As the government task force emphasizes, there is still much we do not know about hypertension. But all the evidence supports the "possibility that relatively simple hygienic measures, such as control of weight and avoidance of abuse of salt, may have great potential for primary prevention of hypertension in those identified as being at increased risk at an early age."

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Some plants, unable to find nitrogen in swampy land, obtain it by devouring living creatures. There are more than 500 varieties of carnivorous plants which eat any kind of meat from insect to beef, using endlessly cunning methods to capture their prey.

The tentacles of carnivorous plants are not only mouths but stomachs raised on poles which seize and eat their prey, digesting both meat and blood and leaving nothing but a skeleton.

Insect-devouring sundews pay no attention to pebbles, bits of metal or other foreign substances placed on their leaves, but are quick to sense the nourishment to be derived from a piece of meat. Darwin found that the sundew is so sensitive it can be excited when a piece of thread is laid on it weighing no more than 1-78,000 of a gram. A tendril, which next to the rootlets constitutes the most sensitive portion of a plant, will bend if a piece of thread is laid across it weighing but .00025 of a gram.

The familiar Venus flytrap is only one of the carnivorous plants we can grow in our collection. As our plant appetite (excuse me) increases, we are learning more and more about our green friends; each one different, each one distinct. We can only sit in wonder at the magnificence of creation.

Goat Milk Isn't Always Better Than Cow's Milk

Answer: Goat milk and cow's milk have similar nutrient values. The protein differs only slightly while the fat pattern is quite different, although the total amount of fat is similar. Goat milk is almost completely deficient in folic acid while cow's milk contains sufficent folic acid to support normal growth in a healthy infant. Canned goat milk is often fortified with vitamins C and D, as is canned cow's milk, and can safely be fed to an infant receiving his folic acid requirement from other sources such as vegetables. Goat milk cannot be called better for babies than cow's milk but it can be adequate under certain conditions.

Answer: Other good sources of iron would include other organ meats (kidney, heart), red meats, dried peas, dried beans, lentils, dark green leafy vegetables, whole grain or enriched breads and cereals, egg yolks, nuts and dried fruits (raisins, apricots, etc.).

Question: Do macaroni, spaghetti and noodles contain milk or other lairy products?

Answer: Macaroni, spaghetti and noodles are frequently made from semolina, which is a wheat flour, and sometimes with egg and milk. The actual ingredients will be listed on the package and will differ for different products.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The words, "expert play," are often misapplied, but such is not the case in today's deal. South's play of his slam contract was turly expert. The hand came up in a rubber-bridge game.

	NORTH ♠ A 7 ♡ A K 10 8 4 2 ◇ 7 5 4 ♣ 9 3
WEST ♠ 6 ♡ 6 5 ◇ J 10 9 3 2 ♣ Q 10 8 5 2		EAST ♠ J 10 9 2 ♡ J 9 7 3 ◇ Q 8 ♣ J 7 4
	SOUTH ♠ K Q 8 5 4 3 ♡ Q ◇ A K 6 ♣ A K 6

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

South's final bid of six no-trump, rather than six spades, is difficult to understand, considering that North was known to have the spade ace; and in addition, North had raised spades. Actually, six spades was there for the taking, with only one trump trick being lost.

After South's diamond king had won the opening lead, the heart queen was cashed. Now came the key play: South led his three of spades and inserted dummy's seven-spot. After winning this trick with his nine, East returned the diamond queen to South's ace. A spade was then led to dummy's ace and on the ace and king of hearts South discarded his minor-suit losers. A club lead to South's ace now enabled declarer to cash all of his spades, plus the club king. His only loser was a spade.

Had South's initial spade lead (at trick three) been taken by the board's ace, the slam contract would have been defeated. In this case dummy's ace and king of hearts would have been cashed next, South discarding thereon his minor-suit losers.

Spades would then have been played, South losing the fourth spade lead to East's jack. East would now have cashed his established jack of hearts, for the setting trick. The success of declarer's contract necessitated his playing the hand as he did: giving away a spade trick before cashing the board's ace and king of hearts.

As he played the hand, declarer gave up his chance of making all 13 tricks. Mathematically speaking, he was a favorite not to lose a trick, since the five outstanding spades figured to be divided 3-2. And if the latter distribution existed, then South would make six spade tricks by cashing the ace, king and queen of spades. But he wasn't going to jeopardize his slam contract for an insignificant overtrick..

Youths Guilty in Theft Spree

Two young men facing five counts of theft, breaking and entering with intent to steal were convicted of one offence when they appeared Wednesday in county court.

Harold James George and Conrad Gregory Lucas were found guilty of stealing a car from Ellery Street in Esquimalt the night of Nov. 24, 1976, which led to a series of escapades and the death of a companion in a crash north of Nanaimo the morning of Nov. 25.

Lucas was sentenced to 30 days in jail and George was placed on one year's probation when sentence was suspended by Judge E. J. C. Stewart.

Charges of breaking, entering and theft of liquor at the government liquor store, 770 Goldstream; of breaking and entering with intent to steal at Bayview Store, Mill Bay; of breaking, entering and theft at Mill Bay Rentals; and of breaking, entering and theft at Barry's Garage, Cobble Hill, were dismissed.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said the accused, George's 18-year-old brother Robert and 16-year-old Richard M. Valenzuela were all together that night up to the time they were found unconscious in a wrecked car at 9 a.m. next morning seven miles north of Nanaimo.

Bottles of wine and various items of merchandise were found, including a tape deck, pocket calculator, cigarettes and carpenter's tools, the latter missed by the owner of the car taken from Ellery Street which was abandoned up-Island. A second car was the one involved in the crash.

Valenzuela told the court he and his friends were celebrating Robert George's birthday and were drinking beer and whiskey at his residence, 831 Ellery, from about 10 p.m. to about 3 a.m. next day.

He said they left, walked about two blocks and stole a car, which he remembered driving around.

The next thing he recalled was awakening in hospital with chest and abdominal injuries. He learned about four days later he was was in Nanaimo General Hospital, where he remained for three weeks.

Defence counsel Robert Johnston elected to call no evidence.

Counselling 'Garbage' —McGeer

Education Minister Pat McGeer told the legislature Wednesday night his ministry knows "some absolute garbage" is offered in some counselling classes in B.C. schools.

The minister was replying to Conservative leader Scott Wallace who sought an investigation into the classes which he said invade the privacy of parents.

"They're invading the privacy of parents who are left in ignorance as to some of the questions that their children are being asked in those guidance classes to the extent that I sometimes wonder whether these classes and the staff responsible think they're running a school or a mental health clinic," Wallace said.

He then quoted from questionnaires given to students at the A. L. Fortune secondary school in Enderby and at Nanaimo which asked such questions as: "Would it upset your parents if you married someone (A) from a different religion or (B) a different race?" or "does your family have enough money?"

McGeer said those questionnaires distress him, but the ministry of education "doesn't control what happens in every classroom."

School Threatened —Cocke

Dennis Cocke accused the provincial government Wednesday of trying to shut down the Jericho Hill School for the Deaf in Vancouver by attrition.

Cocke (NDP — New Westminster) said Education Minister Pat McGeer's program of sending the youngsters back into their own school districts dumps financing onto the school districts themselves and makes the local taxpayers pay the bill.

Cocke said the government has "made it uncomfortable in there for kids who should still be there but who are not by virtue of the fact it is an uncomfortable place to be now."

"It is death by attrition. They are going to make it so bad at Jericho that the parents are going to choose to send their children elsewhere."

The former health minister said he favors a central facility because it provides the students with the opportunity to learn to socialize and prepares them for independence.

"I suggest that Jericho needs to be improved, not torn down; I suggest that people should be attracted, not dissuaded from sending their children to Jericho Hill."

BEAR EATS TOURIST

OSLO (AP) — A 33-year-old Austrian tourist on a camping trip in the fjords was killed and eaten by a polar bear, Norwegian authorities reported today.

Fourteen other campers in the party of 15 who pitched tents near the Magdalena fjord north of Spitsbergen were rescued by helicopter after the Monday attack.

They told authorities that the group was asleep inside their tents when they heard a scratching noise. Their comrade went outside to check on the noise and was immediately attacked by the bear.

The other campers, armed with ice axes and ski poles, rushed to rescue their friend from the bear's clutches but the animal dealt a heavy blow to one of them and they were forced to flee.

The campers climbed onto a nearby glacier and watched helplessly as the bear carried their friend to an ice floe in the fjord and devoured him.

In a similar incident in 1971, a Norwegian working at Bear Island near Spitsbergen was killed by a polar bear.

GARDENING

Simple Way to Pickle Walnuts

Many requests are received each year for a simple basic recipe for pickling walnuts, but most come too late in the season.

Walnuts needed for pickling must be picked before the outer covers show any indication of hardening. While the condition of the fruits will vary in different seasons, mid-July is usually the latest date for picking in this area.

The correct picking time may be determined by piercing a sample fruit with a needle. When the cover is soft enough for the needle point to pass through easily the fruit is in the right condition. Any resistance to the needle point indicates hardening of the cover has commenced.

PREPARING WALNUTS FOR PICKLING. Wash the walnuts several times in cold water. Cover the table or workspace with several complete sections of newspapers; have rubber gloves ready for protection of the hands, and some tool for pricking the walnut skins. The tool can be a knitting needle, or a 2- or 3-pronged meat fork with fine tines.

Every nut is pricked all over so that the brine in which it is soaked later can penetrate. For this pricking session you need the good covering of newspapers on the table, and the rubber gloves on the hands, because the nuts exude a juice which stains everyting it touches and is difficult to remove. Keep the pricked nuts on the papers, not on a board or table that could be damaged by the stains.

PICKLING BRINE. Sufficient water to cover the nuts is boiled. When cold add one-half pound of common salt to each two quarts of water. The nuts remain in the brine for five days, usually in a stone crock because of the action of the salt and the stain of the juice.

BLACKENING. After five days, the nuts are taken from the brine and spread on a tray that will not be damaged by the salt; a piece of unfinished three-ply with trips along the edges to keep the nuts from falling off when moved is suitable.

The tray is then placed in the sun until the nuts are uniformly black all over. This requires constant turning of the nuts to expose all surfaces to the sun.

The time for blackening depends on the intensity and warmth of the sun; on a bright, hot day it may take no more than eight to ten hours. If necessary to continue for a second or third day, the tray is brought into a warm place in the house overnight, and put out into the sun the next morning.

SPICED VINEGAR. When nuts are thoroughly black all over they are packed into wide-mouthed preserving jars and covered with spiced vinegar. To each quart of best vinegar in an enamel saucepan, add one ounce Allspice, pinch cayenne pepper, two cloves and a small piece of mace.

Bring vinegar to the boil, strain off the spices, and allow the liquid to cool before pouring over the walnuts in the jars.

Glass-capped jars are best. If metal screw caps are used place wax paper between the vinegar and the metal cap. With 2-piece metal caps, coat the metal lid plate with paro-wax. Vinegar corrodes metal.

The jars are stored in a dark, COOL place. A jar can be sampled after four weeks, but the flavor is much better after six months storage. In fact, it is a common practice to sample a jar for Christmas dinner.

4,000 Witnesses Here

An indivdual should be able to determine for himself what beliefs are worth dying for, a delegation of 4,000 Jehovah's Witnesses were told today at the opening of the annual district convention at Memorial Arena.

And it is for this reason that Jehovah's Witnesses refuse blood transfusions, speaker Eugene Rosam of Toronto told the convention.

In the book of Genesis in the Bible, it says that human blood is the only food man must not eat, he said.

"The Witnesses believe that blood transfusions are a form of feeding on blood; intravenous feeding."

"Jehovah's Witnesses want to live. That is why we seek medical attention. We refuse only one facet of medical care."

Although some people suggest that receiving a blood transfusion is a way of preserving life and that preserving life comes before all principles, human dignity is enhanced by permitting the individual to determine for himself what beliefs are worth dying for, he said.

A dedicated doctor simply does the best he can under the circumstances, "and that is all the Jehovah's Witnesses ask to be done in their case."

He added that transfusions carry medical dangers which underscore the reasonableness of the Witnesses' position.

Consumers Suffer

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union says its industrial output for the first half of the year exceeded expectations, but admits the gains have not filtered down to consumers, who face shortages, long lines and surly clerks.

Flood Death Toll Feared to Top 100

Times News Services

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. — Rescue workers searched towns surrounding Johnstown today for more victims of Wednesday's flood which state police said may have killed more than 100 people.

Police said they had already found 37 victims of the flood which sent water 15 feet deep gushing through this coal mining city of 41,000.

"Right now we're beginning to search for victims in the small surrounding towns," a state police spokesman here said. "The death toll could exceed 100."

Thousands of people were left homeless by the flooding which also sparked a brief looting spree in the downtown area. Police were ordered to shoot looters on sight.

Communications were almost completely broken down. Exhausted police and rescue crews worked through the night to establish command posts and communications into this city of 41,000 and other towns in the area.

Mud and debris clogged roads and covered wrecked autos and homes but shortly after sunrise two four-wheel drive vehicles were able to inch their way into Johnstown from Cambria County civil defence headquarters at nearby Ebensburg.

Seven counties were battered Wednesday when torrential rains overloaded small creeks and rivers along a 70-mile stretch of the Conemaugh River Valley.

Gov. Milton Shapp, who estimated there was more than $200 million damage in Johnstown alone, said the White House action would allow local authorities to begin purchasing badly needed food, emergency equipment and medical supplies.

Shapp said he is making plans to release an additional $1 million in state aid.

"It's too early to tell how much money we will need," the governor said. "We just have no way of assessing the total damage."

In the meantime, residents of ravaged Johnstown were digging out of the muddy rubble with bulldozers and shovels.

★ Heat Wave Peters Out

Associated Press

A heat wave that has polluted air, destroyed crops and killed people and livestock in a 2,000-mile belt of the United States from the Atlantic Coast to the Rockies appears to be petering out.

The U.S. weather service predicted a cooling trend today from the Great Lakes across to the central plains, where temperatures in the 30s and 40s Celsius have been recorded for more than a week. The Atlantic coast was not expected to be so lucky, with forecasters calling for continued hot weather at least into the weekend.

Rain was expected to provide partial relief in many sections of the heat belt.

The prolonged hot and dry spell has caused poultry losses in Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and Massachusetts. Some crop farmers along the East Coast have begun irrigation to prevent their crops from burning.

Two Liberals Helped By Foreign Takeover

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal cabinet has been accused of extricating two senior members of the national Liberal party, Senator Keith Davey and treasurer Gordon Dryden, from serious financial trouble.

The charge was made in the House of Commons Wednesday by Tom Cossitt, a former Liberal who now is a Progressive Conservative MP for the Ontario riding of Leeds and who has made a career out of uncovering Liberal mistakes.

At issue was a recent cabinet approval of the foreign takeover of Pony Sporting Goods Canada Ltd., in which both Davey and Dryden had an interest. The approval, as is usual, followed the recommendation of the Foreign Investment Review Agency.

Cossit said Pony was suspended from trading on the stock market by the Ontario Securities Commission last January for being delinquent in filing financial information.

"Was the cabinet aware at the time that, in effect, it would possibly take steps to bail out financially these two prominent Liberals," he asked. Davey, as well as being a senator, also is the party's senior campaign manager.

Industry Minister Jean Chretien replied that the transaction was handled normally by FIRA, which, ironically has the task of ensuring that foreign takeovers of Canadian firms are of significant benefit to Canadians.

"We treated them the same way we treat all Canadian citizens," Chretien said of Davey and Dryden.

Chretien also said he was unaware, as Cossit charged, that the firm that took over Pony was Mitsubishi International of Japan, which controls Pony's American parent firm, in which Davey also has interests. Pony produces a line of footwear and other athletic paraphenalia.

Resthaven Bridge Role?

Resthaven Hospital in Sidney could serve temporarily as an extended care hospital before being reborn as a larger hospital providing intermediate care.

That's the suggestion of board chairman A. W. Kaytor in a letter considered by the regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission Wednesday night.

The 66-bed hospital which has provided acute care at the north end of the Saanich Peninsula since 1921 will be phased out of that kind of care when a new wing of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital opens in the spring.

In his letter Kaytor says the Seventh-day Adventist Church, which owns the Resthaven property, "is most anxious to have this institution continue in some form of service to the community of Sidney and North Saanich."

He also hints there could be trouble if the hospital is simply erased because it enjoys a lot of public support.

"The consensus of our board of trustees based on need is that a 150-bed intermediate care facility be constructed on the present property. This has not reached the stage of a formal application at the present time."

In the meantime, Resthaven could serve as a 50-bed extended care hospital for a maximum of two years after the peninsula hospital's new wing opens. That would give time to develop plans for the intermediate-care hospital.

Kaytor said that unless there is some plan to use Resthaven, the church will sell the property.

His comments are contained in a letter written to Health Minister Bob McClelland last month which some commission members thought should have been more properly sent to them as the agency for planning regional hospital development.

The subject was tabled pending a report from Murray Halkett, the new regional director of hospital planning.

Russia Builds Radar Towers

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — The Soviet Union is building high towers near its borders in a move believed linked to the future deployment of the United States Cruise missile, NATO intelligence sources said today.

The towers, which the sources said are hundreds of feet high, are believed topped with the most modern radar systems the Soviet Union can make.

"The radar devices, from their position on the towers, can 'look down' a great distance to the horizon and thus pick up any incoming low-flying Cruise," said one source.

News of the Soviet towers comes three weeks after U.S. President Carter decided to cancel the B—1 strategic bomber in favor of the Cruise missile, which skims the earth's contours en route to its target.

The sources said the Soviet program to build the towers was already under way at the time of Carter's decision. It must therefore have been designed for use against either the B—1 or the Cruise, both of which were designed to fly low in their final attack phase, they said.

Ground-based radar stations are blind to low-flying aircraft or missiles, or see them so late that linked anti-aircraft guns and rockets as well as interceptor planes have no time to attack them.

The Cruise, a pilotless jet carrying a nuclear warhead 10 times as powerful as the Hiroshima bomb, can fly at under 100 feet altitude.

The sources said the Soviet Union will probably increase its mobile air defences because the Cruise can be made to avoid fixed enemy guns and rocket sites but is helpless against a moving enemy.

The sources said NATO also expects the Soviet Union to build up its air fleet to attack Cruise-carrying B—52 bombers, which would have to fly to within 300 miles of the Soviet border before releasing the weapons.

Aug. 15 Remand In Shooting

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Wyne William O'Brien, 21, was remanded until Aug. 15 Tuesday to face a murder charge in connection with the fatal shooting of former Ontario schoolteacher Michael Alexander Vasey, 42.

Vasey's body was found here Jan. 15, 1976.

O'Brien was detained in Detroit pending the outcome of an appeal against his extradition ordered by a United States federal court judge last October. He was returned here last weekend.

A South Pacific Nessie?

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese trawler off New Zealand netted a 30-foot, two-ton sea creature which a marine biologist says resembled an extinct sea reptile of 130 million years ago.

Prof. Fujio Yasuda of Tokyo Fisheries University, who studied photographs of the creature on board the ship, said it looked like a prehistoric plesiosaurus.

"Some of the crew thought it was a whale, others a turtle without a shell, some joked it was a monster," Michihiko Yano, a fishing company executive, said Wednesday.

Yano told reporters it was kept aboard for an hour. The crew then cast it back into the ocean because they feared the rotting creature would contaminate their commercial catch of eel-like whiptail fish.

Yano took color photographs and sketchd the animal when it was hoisted aboard the trawler last April 25, about 30 miles east of Christchurch.

The Japanese media, seizing on a possible link to Scotland's legendary Loch Ness monster, dubbed the beast the South Pacific Nessie.

"I was not sure what it was at the time, but it does look like drawings I saw of Nessie after my return home last month," Yano said as he showed reporters the photographs.

They show an animal with white and red skin hanging from its bones. Yano said it had two fins front and rear, a five-foot neck and a six-foot tail.

"As soon as I saw the photos, I knew it was something extremely rare," Yasuda, 46, said in a telephone interview. "Without a bone sample, however, it's impossible to determine just what animal it was."

Women Using Estrogen Risk Cancer

WASHINGTON (WP) The U.S. Food and Drug Administration ruled Wednesday that the millions of middle-aged women who take estrogen-containing drugs for a year or longer must be repeatedly warned that they are multiplying the normal risk of cancer of the uterus five to 10 times.

Starting Sept. 21, the FDA will require pharmacists and physicians who dispense the female sex hormone to provide users with a special plain-language brochure each time they have a prescription filled.

The brochure rejects promotional claims, which manufacturers and others have made for more than a decade, that prolonged use of estrogen actually may prevent cancer and, in the process, keep users "femine forever."

"You may have heard that taking estrogens for long periods (years) after the menopause will keep your skin soft and supple and keep you feeling young," the brochure says at one point. "There is no evidence that this is so, however, and such long-term treatment carries important risks."

Manufacturers will print the brochures. Averst Laboratories, a division of American Home Products Corp., makes the most widely prescribed brand, Premarin.

Currently, the FDA estimates, three million women take the drugs for both menopausal and post-menopausal symptoms. About twice as many were taking them in December, 1975, when three separate teams of scientists reported that long-term estrogen intake increases the risk of cancer of the endometrium (lining of the uterus).

FDA commissioner Donald Kennedy said the agency is "concerned that estrogens are used too frequently and for too long, and our aim is that the information to be provided to patients will lead to better use of these drugs — including less pressure on physicians to prescribe them."

★ CIGARETTE WARNING ATTACKED

WASHINGTON (UPI) The health warning labels found on packs of cigarettes have failed to adequately explain smoking hazards and the U.S. Federal Trade Commission says the language must be tougher.

An FTC study by Dr. Martin Fishbein of the University of Illinois said Wednesday almost half of current smokers still have not "fully accepted the general, undifferentiated proposition that 'smoking cigarettes is dangerous to health'."

The study said "there is little question that there is even less general acceptance of propositions linking smoking to specific health consequences such as heart disease, emphysema, chronic bronchitis and lowered birth weights."

The agency, in its annual report to Congress on smoking, repeated the recommendation it has made in past years to toughen the warning label carried on cigarette packs and in print advertising.

New language, the FTC said, should warn "cigarette smoking is a major health hazard and may result in your death" or in specific diseases such as emphysema and cancer.

The current language is: "Warning: The Surgeon-General has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

The FTC said it remains concerned cigarette ads still portray smokers as strong, vigorous, healthy, outdoor types thus encouraging "consumers to ignore the grave health consequences of smoking."

Jaworski to Head Korea Bribe Probe

WASHINGTON (WP) — Leon Jaworski, the former Watergate special prosecutor, agreed Wednesday to return to Washington to take over the internal House of Representatives investigation of alleged South Korean influence-buying in Congress.

Jaworski, 71, will replace his former Watergate assistant, Philip Lacovara, who resigned last week after a dispute with House ethics committee chairman John Flynt Jr. (D — Ga.) over the pace of the committee's inquiry.

Flynt, who was visibly upset earlier in the day because the House leadership announced the impending appointment before he did, said Jaworski will come to Washington from Houston in mid-August and will serve without pay.

Accused Spy Aides Nabbed

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Two men accused of aiding Soviet-bloc spies planned to use a cabin cruiser to smuggle components of the topsecret U.S. Cruise missile to Soviet agents in Cuba within the next two weeks, the FBI says.

Carl Weischenberg, 33, a West German, who officials said is awaiting trial in his own country on charges of high treason and was living in Freeport, in the Bahamas, and Carl John Heiser, 32, of Highland Beach, Fla., were arrested Wednesday at Fort Lauderdale International Airport as Weischenberg prepared to board a plane for Freeport.

They were charged with "acting as agents of East Germany and the Soviet Union without prior notification to the secretary of state," a charge less severe than espionage because the government wants to expedite the case, a knowledgeable source said.

"When you have a foreign national leaving the country you want to act quickly," the source said.

The charge carries a fine of $5,000 and up to 10 years in jail.

CIA Eyed the 'Perfect Murder'

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Central Intelligence Agency sought and received suggestions in 1949 on how to commit the perfect murder, newly-disclosed documents show.

A memo from an unidentified person, dated Nov. 29, 1949, and addressed only to "Bill," discussed ways murder might be committed without leaving clues that would indicate murder.

Another memorandum, addressed to the director of the CIA and dated July 14, 1952, outlined how the agency used drugs and hypnosis to interrogate two Soviet citizens who were suspected double agents. Walter Bedell Smith was director of the CIA at that time.

The author of the first memo suggested that a perfect murder might be committed by using chemical substances that leave no trace, exposing bodies to x-rays after which death should result within a few weeks, smothering victims with a pillow or strangling them with a wide piece of cloth or bath towel, letting victims freeze to death, or subjecting them to carbon dioxide gas produced by dry ice.

The memos are among 1,000 pages of documents the CIA turned over to John Marks, a former U.S. state department intelligence officer now with the Centre for National Security Studies.

The documents, which contained much information that has been publicized previously, were made public under the Freedom of Information Act.

The two Soviet agents were hypnotized, urged to talk about their former lives, then induced into amnesia so they would not recall the interrogation, the memo said.

One of the agents "actually 'relived' certain past activities of his life, some dating back 13 years" and accepted the case officer "as an old trusted and beloved personal friend whom the subject had known in years past" in the Soviet Union, the memo said.

Both of the agents spoke Russian but no English.

TV 'SUGAR JUNKIES'?

WASHINGTON (UPI) Consumer forces trying to persuade the U.S. government to ban TV commercials for candy believe they have aroused enough interest in the project that the Federal Trade Commission will propose regulations.

Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television, predicted government action Wednesday after she and persons representing thousands of teachers, health professionals and other organizations met for nearly 90 minutes with two FTC commissioners.

Ms. Charron's group and the others petitioned the FTC earlier this year for such a ban, charging that children are lured into being sugar "junkies" at an early age.

JUVENILE CAMP HEAD

By LIZ HUGHES, Times Staff

The man hired by the provincial government to run a new containment centre for juveniles in B.C. is a former director of the Saskatchewan agency now under judicial investigation for the alleged brutal treatment of young inmates at a wilderness prison camp.

Ron Williams has been hired by the corrections branch of the ministry of the attorney-general, effective June 27, as director of the Centre Creek camp-type containment centre for juvenile offenders near Chilliwack, scheduled to open Oct. 1 as part of the new provincial program to deal with hard-core juvenile delinquents.

Williams is the former associate director of a private, non-profit society based in Regina called Ranch Ehrlo, now the subject of a judicial inquiry into allegations that some teenaged inmates of the society's two wilderness camps in northern Saskatchewan were cruelly treated.

The two camps were closed at the urging of the RCMP and the department of northern Saskatchewan in early February and the judicial inquiry headed by District Court Judge J. H. Maher has heard a week's testimony and scheduled to resume Aug. 11.

Allegations of brutal treatment, told to RCMP by inmates, include:

—One boy who cooked too much macaroni for dinner one night was forced to eat the excess macaroni, then punched in the stomach by a staff member until be vomited, and forced to eat his own vomit;

—One punishment for wrong-doing at the camp was being forced to chop wood for periods up to 48 hours, without food;

—Inmates who attempted to escape were made to hike distances of up to 40 miles without food to show them just how far then were away from civilization.

There are about 10 allegations of brutality covering a period of about two years up until the time the camps were closed.

Williams said today in a telephone interview from his temporary office in the Chilliwack forest camp, that he had worked for Ranch Ehrlo for 11 years since its inception in 1966 until he was hired by the B.C. government last month.

"I was expecting a phone call like yours," Williams told the Times.

He said he had realized there would be concern about his hiring.

"I figured people might say, 'there's Williams and he's from Ranch Ehrlo and Ranch Ehrlo's bad so why was he hired?'

"But I feel strongly that all has not been told and that the program wasn't really given a fair shake."

Williams said the board of directors of the Ranch Ehrlo society decided to close the two controversial camps for a number of reasons.

"The allegations made by inmates, passed on by the RCMP, were mostly "blown out of proportion and had no basis in fact," he said.

There was no documentation to back up the allegations, but the directors did feel that some of the allegations could have a basis in

TORONTO SWELTERS

TORONTO (CP) — A record of 37 degrees Celsius (99 F) was set Wednesday in the downtown area as a heat wave turned metropolitan Toronto into a giant sauna bath.

The temperature broke the previous record for the day set in 1954 by 1½ degrees.

In the borough of North York, Hydro officials called industrial customers and appealed in radio broadcasts for a cut in electricity consumption as the system came within 15 megawatts of its peak capacity of 560 megawatts. (See U.S. weather story, Page 34).

CBC Boss Denounces Report

OTTAWA (CP) — CBC president Al Johnson rejected today as "grautious and insulting" the accusation that the broadcasting media are "biased to the point of subversiveness" because broadcasters hold different opinions about what is newsworthy.

Johnson said he finds totally unacceptable the "universal condemnation of the entire electronic news media, and by inference all the news media generally, for being biased to the point of subversiveness because they have differing views on what is important to their viewers and listeners."

Johnson was reacting to a report by the Canadian Radio-television and Tele-communications Commission (CRTS) on its special inquiry into the CBC.

Despite his unequivocal rejection of the report's broad condemnations of the media, Johnson said he welcomes the report's finding that the publicly-owned CBC was not guilty of a pro-separatist bias.

However, unlike Johnson, MP Cyril Symes (NDP — Sault Ste. Marie) said he thought the damning condemnation that the electronic media are subversive is fully justified.

"I don't think that's an intemperate criticism," Symes said in an interview.

"That's hitting the nail on the head."

Johnson said it is also significant that a substantial number of the inquiry's criticism of the CBC involve problems he has already identified.

Quebec will be represented at the premiers conference by Inter-governmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin.

Outlook Glum: OECD

Times News Services

PARIS — Economic experts painted a gloomy picture Wednesday of growth among industrialized countries, suggesting that inflation, unemployment and foreign trade problems will plague most of them in the next 12 months.

Real growth in Canada will increase by only about three per cent this year, said the 24-country Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development in its twice-yearly survey.

It suggested that the forecast volume increase in the gross national product GNP in Canada will be insufficient to reduce industrial slack and the unemployment rate, currently about eight per cent, "may stay very high."

The OECD "foresees that growth of real disposable income available to households will drop off sharply" because 1976 wage contracts provide lower pay increases than earlier agreements. At the same time, there will be a continuing rise in prices of food products and imports.

"Even if the rate of personal savings were to diminish sharply, say 1½ per cent, the rate of growth in consumer spending would scarcely reach half the 1976 level," the report adds.

Elsewhere, the report says growth in public spending on goods and services could accelerate this year but the growth rate will not exceed three per cent in real terms.

"As the ratio of sales to inventory seems to have reached average levels, it is improbable that inventories will contribute much to increasing general demand," the report says.

"Continuing expansion in the United States should stimulate Canadian exports," the report adds, "but it is believed that, on the whole, foreign markets will develop much less this year."

The advisory body singled out the United States as the only country where prospects for sustained expansion seem reasonably optimistic.

But it said: "The growth rates forecast for domestic demand in most other countries in the first half of next year would be insufficient to provide an incentive for capital-widening investments or to prevent a further rise in unemployment."

The U.S. should continue trying to expand its economy despite fears it could spark a new inflationary spiral, the organization said.

In its mid-1977 report, the economic watchdog for the now-Communist industrialized world said U.S. economic expansion is needed to keep the faltering economies of other nations afloat.

The OECD report said America's economic growth had been higher than expected in the past year, and predicted that although "expansion may slow down somewhat . . . a satisfactory pace . . . seems likely over coming months."

HOUSEHOLD ROBOT EVEN INSULTING

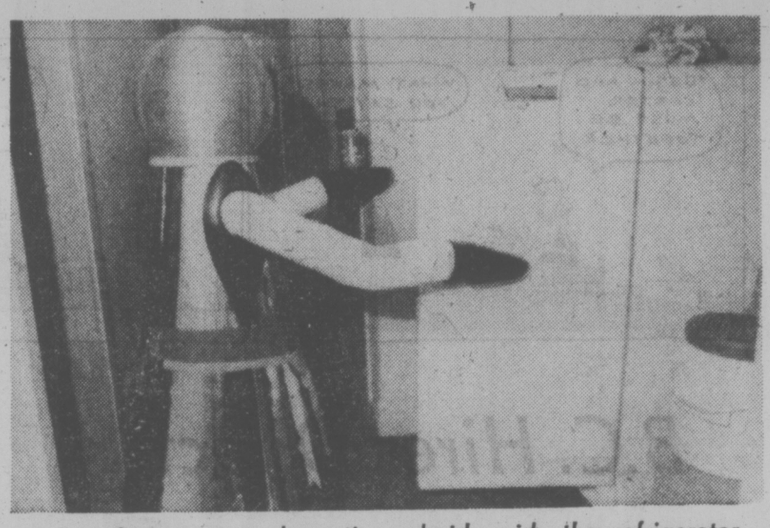
RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — A local company plans to manufacture a 5-foot-2, 180-pound robot that can serve your dinner, vacuum your rugs, babysit your kids and insult your enemies.

"We've programmed the robot to approximate human behavior," says Anthony Reichelt, president of Quasar Industries. "The only limitations to what it can do is the boundary of imagination and the cost factor."

The robot, which the company calls a domestic android, has been researched for the last eight years and is in the final testing stages.

"We're about 22 months away from production," Reichelt said, adding the robots will sell for under $4,000.

Quasar's only business is manufacturing robots. Until now, the company's robots have been used for animated props and as promotional gimmicks.



Robot, known as a domestic android, raids the refrigerator

It is cone-shaped with a bubble head and two arms. It carries a computer that can be programmed by the owner with a calculator-like device. It also responds to an owner's voice.

It is programmed with a 250-word taped vocabulary and runs on 24-volt batteries.

"The robot can be programmed to answer the door at a certain time," Reichelt said. "When guests arrive, the robot can say, 'May I announce you please?' When the guests give their names, the robot tapes the conversation and plays it back to his owner."

And if anyone breaks into the owner's house, the robot is programmed to sound an alarm. It then goes to the point of entry and verbally challenges the intruder.

Lone Suspect Released In Multiple Slayings

NORTH VANCOUVER — Police returned to square one today after releasing the only suspect they had picked up in connection with the multiple riverside slayings near Chilliwack Monday night.

RCMP said the 27-year-old former mental patient they had picked up was cleared in the case. They said his movements Monday night did not place him in the area of the rifle attack which left two and possibly four teenagers dead.

Police picked the man up Wednesday, released him, and then picked him up again and held him overnight for questioning. Police had said there had been reports that the man, who had a history of using firearms, had been in the area of the shootings.

The man's name was withheld.

Staff Sergeant Dave McLay heading the RCMP investigation from Agassiz detachment, said investigations were continuing and further searches of the Fraser River near the shooting site may take place later today, depending on weather and current.

RCMP divers had to terminate operations Wednesday afternoon due to rise of more than one foot in the water-level of the river which made diving operations too dangerous to continue.

The man sought for the killings may have driven from the scene with either an accomplice or one of two other youths still missing, police also said today.

A police spokesman said a truck belonging to one of the youths was seen by a witness

"It is believed there were two people in the vehicle," McLay said. But he would not speculate whether the second person was an accomplice or as abducted person.

FRAUD RING LOOTS BANKS OF $200,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — A ring of more than 50 persons has defrauded Lower Mainland banks of $200,000 in the past year by impersonating customers, a Vancouver bank official said Wednesday.

Jack Holt, administrative inspector at the Bank of Commerce, said the bank has lost $40,000 since last summer when the ring began passing bad cheques using customer names, account numbers and signature samples.

Earlier this month the ring bilked the Bank of Montreal of $12,000 in 20 incidents during two days.

Holt said the well-organized ring obtains customer information from many sources, including theft from the mails and planting conspirators in department store accounting departments.

The ring began operating last August, Holt said, and hit the Bank of Commerce heavily during February.

He said customer impersonation is an old trick but the fraud artists have never been so well organized.

A spokesman for RCMP in North Vancouver, where the ring has been active, said the group's activities might have spread throughout Western Canada.

Egypt Fighting On Libyan Front

CAIRO (AP) — Libyan and Egyptian armored and air forces engaged in heavy fighting along the northern border today, resulting in the destruction of 40 Libyan tanks and two planes, Cairo radio reported.

Libya had no immediate comment on the reported fighting, which ended in the afternoon.

Cairo radio quoted a military spokesman as saying that 30 Libyan army trucks were destroyed and 12 members of the 9th Libyan Armored Division were taken prisoner along with 30 saboteurs.

The Egyptian radio said no Egyptians were killed but several were wounded and one truck was destroyed. The report said fighting began in the morning near an Egyptian village 350 miles west of Cairo.

Alaska Oil Arriving Aug. 7

SEATTLE (AP) — The first tanker load of crude oil from the Alaska pipeline will be greeted with a ceremony at Cherry Point tentatively set for Aug. 7, says an Atlantic Richfield Co. spokesman.

The Arco Juneau, a 120,000-ton supertanker built in 1974 specifically for Alaska oil runs, probably will be the first tanker carrying Prudhoe Bay oil to dock in the lower 48 states, Manny Jimenez, Arco public relations representative, said Wednesday in Los Angeles.

He said the schedule is subject to change because of uncertainties over when oil will arrive at Valdez, Alaska, the southern pipeline terminus. The trip from Alaska to the Washington port will take about 3½ days.

Meanwhile, Governor Dixy Lee Ray wants to consider laying an oil pipeline underwater from the Olympic Peninsula to Whidbey Island before she supports a site for a major oil port, says one of her advisers.

Capt. Merle Adlum, president of the Inland Boatman's Union, says the governor has not decided where she would favor the siting of a major oil port.

Probe Launched Into Kerster's Claims

A internal investgation has been launched into two controversial Insurance Corp. of B.C. claims which the opposition has charged were paid because of political interference by Socred George Kerster (Coquitlam).

Education minister Pat McGeer, responsible for the crown corporation, said in the legislature Wednesday that a "thorough investigation is taking place" into the week-long accusations and revelations by the NDP and counter-charges and defence by the minister.

The opposition's interest in the issue revolves around allegations that Kerster personally interfered in the two claims and that he had an interest in interfering in them.

Payment of one of the claims, to a young New Westminster resident, Leslie Wood, benefited a personal friend of Kerster's, the opposition has charged.

Payment of the second claim benefited Surrey Dodge Ltd., a car dealership headed by Kerster until his election as MLA in 1975.

McGeer, in his counter-charge, had said the NDP is basing its case on stolen documents.

Kerster, meanwhile, said Wednesday he thinks the whole thing is "kinky."

"The only thing they haven't charged me with this week is robbing a bank," he said in an interview.

Kerster said he has asked Attorney-General Garde-Gardom to launch an investigation into the "stolen" documents used by the NDP. Gardom has not yet given him an answer, he said.

McGeer repeated his stolen documents charges Wednesday, saying that "either someone is being set up, or when they pay for their stolen documents, they should pay enough to get the whole file."

The NDP has been tabling parts of the two claims files in the legislature for the past week.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said Wednesday that if the opposition receives some documents, it has a duty to make them public.

Macdonald tabled other documents Wednesday to back up his charge that claims paid out to Leslie Wood should not have been paid on their own merit, but were paid only after Kerster's interference with ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick.

The money from the claims was actually paid, not to Wood himself, but to a New Westminster finance company, First Charter Financial Corp. Ltd., headed by Bill Butler, a personal friend of Kerster's.

Time Out on the Square

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

It's a lazy easy-going place these days, making room for all kinds of people and a platoon of pigeons.

But Centennial Square wasn't always that way and people being what they are, won't always be in future.

For the moment the young people prefer the grass to eat their sandwich or snooze, to flirt or soak in the sun. The older people favor the benches but feel enough at ease to shed their shoes.

You might suspect the square, not even a decade old, has finally come of age. But that would be ignoring both local history and the fundamental place of the square in the affairs of urban people — a place to come and watch, to show off and sometimes sound off.

Centennial Square was just an idea in the early 60s, finally emerging after endless council chatter as part of a $2 million refurbishing which included an antique city hall.

It cost more than expected, of course, with its planes of brick, grass and concrete. But in 1971 it was judged the best beautification project in British Columbia.

Then a traumatic development! People started to gather there, not people really but hippies, long-haired and somewhat smudged. They came in great numbers and just lay around.

One alderman said they should be whipped. Council considered a bylaw to keep them off the grass. The local merchants hated them very much. One mayor even suggested a wall to separate them from respectable commerce.

It's quiet in Centennial Square these days. But don't bet it will stay that way.

Quadra Steel To Stay Here

The company has reached an understanding, as predicted at Victoria Labor Council two weeks ago, with the Joint Shipyard Conference representing a dozen unions employed in Yarrows shipyard and its affiliate Quadra Steel.

"The resulting concessions by both sides permits Quadra Steel Ltd. to remain as a viable operation servicing the Victoria region," Harrison said.

Quadra had intended to close its metal service centre adjoining Yarrows on July 29, the last business day of the month. The company blamed a declining economy and consequent drop in demand for construction and fabricating steel products.

The firm has been a principal supplier of reinforcing bar used in concrete structures and steel plate for shipbuilding, tanks and pressure vessels.

Fifteen employees would have been displaced by the shutdown which would have centralized Quadra's Vancouver Island operations at its Nanaimo plant.

Harrison said union-company discussion was carried on in an "atmosphere of resolving a mutual problem."

Electrician's union business agent Jim McAvoy, president of the Joint Shipyard Conference, chaired the meeting at which final terms were agreed upon.

Harrison would not elaborate on the terms other than to say "they have provided us with some flexibility regarding our operations."

Legal steps remain to be taken, and the union spokesman may wish to specify the arrangements later, Harrison said.

"The results speak for themselves. We're happy to be able to continue the operation of Quadra Steel in Victoria," the company president said.

Hearing Soon On 'Park'

Saanich council is almost ready to put the controversial matter of an industrial park at Royal Oak to public hearing.

Council's lands, planning and housing committee voted Wednesday to recommend a public hearing be held at the earliest possible date, probably sometime after Aug. 29.

The municipal solicitor has been asked to prepare a bylaw.

Council is expected to set a date for the hearing at its next meeting.

The hearing will deal with only the first phase of development and involves about 88 acres in the 140-acre parcel of land under consideration.

HOTEL NOISE UNDER FIRE

'Near-Riotous' Conditions

Strathcona Hotel owner John Olson today promised city aldermen he would try to minimize the noise from the hotel's parking lot on Courtney.

His assurance came after John Richardson, manager of the nearby Chateau Victoria apartment-hotel, complained of the "nightmarish" problems caused by patrons leaving the Old Forge cabaret in the early hours of the morning.

Richardson said in a letter that his establishment had lost 20 tenants in the last three years as well as many prematurely departing hotel guests, and received many complaints, about the "near-riotous conditions that prevail."

"The drunken, vulgar screaming, breaking of bottles, the revving of car motors, screeching of car tires and urinating of both sexes can be seen and heard from the second to the 17th floor, and continues to as early as 4:30 a.m.," he said.

Richardson, who attended this morning's meeting of the council committee, also told aldermen that he had heard similar complaints from the management of the Executive House and The Empress.

Ald. Ron McKenzie said as council is trying to encourage more people to live downtown, his sympathies are with the complainants. But Ald. Murray Glazier said this situation is not as clear cut as complaints aired a few months ago about the James Bay Inn.

That situation involved the direct conflict of a cabaret operation with a residential area, he noted, whereas the Old Forge is downtown and if cabarets can't be permitted there, where were they to go?

Glazier also told Richardson that the Chateau Victoria had been built when cabaret and other uses were already well established, and said the building of the hotel had upset many people because it involved the demolition of a landmark building (the Parrot House) and clearing the land of trees.

Olson, who was attending the meeting to speak on another item of business, claimed that he was not aware any problem existed until Wednesday. He said he would consider installing "bumps" on the parking lot to slow down vehicles and also hiring a security guard to patrol the area in the period around 2 to 3 a.m.

"It is a problem but we will do everything we can," he added.

Unfair Labor Practice By Camosun, Says CUPE

An unfair labor practice complaint has been entered against Camosun College council for its repudiation of a contract negotiated with its staff union.

Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing about 75 inside and outside workers, instructed staff representative Tom Smith to complain to the B.C. Labor Relations Board that the college had not bargained in good faith.

Smith said he had made the formal complaint and that the next move would be up to the LRB.

He said he had never encountered the situation before in his considerable experience of negotiating with public employers.

Bargaining started toward the end of May following an initial meeting which the college principal, bursar and chairman of the negotiating committee attended. The bursar, P. Dean Winram, represented the committee from that point in about 10 or 12 bargaining sessions that produced a tentative agreement later accepted by the CUPE membership, Smith said.

Then the college said Winram had not been given the authority to negotiate a contract, Peter Yorke, negotiating committee chairman, said Winram had been taking part in preliminary discussions only.

He said the union had been told Winram was not given authority to represent the council and had been merely trying to avoid a situation which would have led to appointment of a mediation officer, as the union desired.

Smith said the union had started, as was the practice, with the contract that expired in March and made proposals based on this. When tentative agreement was reached, the proposals were put before the college council and as a result changes were made.

In revising the document, the college made alterations in sections relating to terminology, union security and benefits for early retirement, without any discussion with the union.

Gov't Gives Cash Lift To Gallery

A cheque for the first half of a provincial grant of $223,000 was presented Wednesday by Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf to Art Gallery of Greater Victoria president Donald Miller.

The grant was initiated several months ago before construction of the new wing had begun. Its source is the Community Recreational Facilities Fund.

The grant is to be used to finance expansion of storage, whorkshop and display facilities, including expansion of two existing galleries in addition to the new Asian gallery.

8% Pay Hike For Library

An historic relationship with city hall staff has been restored for Greater Victoria Public Library employees in a new two-year contract negotiated by Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 410.

An 8 per cent wage increase retroactive to Jan. 1 has tacit approval of the Anti-Inflation Board although it exceeds AIB guidelines by 2 per cent.

The board took into account a previously-enjoyed historic relationship in contracts negotiated by city hall and library staffs which was lost in the previous contract.

About 70 librarians, clerks, typists, bookbinders and other will receive 4 per cent wage hike effective from Jan. 1, 4 per cent later and a minimum of 4 per cent in 1978 depending upon cost of living.

In another contract negotiated with Victoria and Saanich as owners of Royal Oak Cemetery, CUPE has secured a 6 per cent increase in wages for about a dozen cemetery employees in 1977 and a minimum 4 per cent next year, again depending on COL. This year's increase is retroactive to January.
